Still Talking Beer. To Mussolini By Air. Trotsky Backs Us. Regulating the Soil.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

THE SENATE and House disagree on the alcoholic content of beer and wine. The House says 3.2 per cent, the Senate 3.05 per cent. The difference is small.

A bottle of 3.2 per cent beer would contain less than half an ounce of olcohol.

Doctors say a child or an old man can safely, and in many cases profitably, absorb two ounces of alcohol a day, properly diluted.

AS FOR 3.2 or 3.05 per cent wine, there is "no such animal."

Mr. Orteig, learned French restaurant keeper, whose $25,000 prize enabled Col. Lindbergh to make his flight to France, says that mild red wines are 8 per cent alcohol, better wines 11 or 12 per cent, Chateau Yquem 14 per cent.

IN ANCIENT days, when men from the North came over the Alps into Italy, sometimes conquering, sometimes not, they climbed slowly through steep passes thousands of feet in the air.

Ramsay MacDonald, prime minister of England, on his way to discuss various matters with Mussolini, travels in a fashion that would surprise the old Germanic invaders, to whom he is related.

He will fly through the air, in a twin-motored seaplane, sitting next to Gen. Balbo, the great Italian flier who guided a whole fleet of airships to perfect formation across the Atlantic Ocean. MacDonald will get out at Ostia, and drive to Rome, to be received by Mussolini.

TROTZKY, WHO once bossed Russia's army, and helped Lenin to throw out the czars, watches the world from Constantinople, alias Istanbul.

Trotzky has been here, knows this "capitalistic country," as Russians call it, and if he were a betting man he would bet on the United States.

He puts it thus:

"World capital will develop under the increasing hegemony of the United States, especially under the hegemony of the dollar over the British sterling."

Wise Trotzky. Hegemony means "leadership," and you will always find it located where great wealth is combined with engineering science and men willing to fight. We have those three things, be it said in all humility.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT doesn't call himself a prophet or a prophet's son and will offer his farm relief bill, with a promise to admit the fact instantly if it should prove a mistake. He wisely calls farm relief "a new and untrod path."

It is hard to regulate production of men scattered all over the earth, competing without organization or agreement.

WHILE BRITAIN'S House of Commons was discussing greater expenditures for fighting ships, a young woman scattered from the gallery reserved for members of the House of Lords pamphlets saying that war expenses were increased while appropriations for education, unemployment relief and housing were cut down. The pamphlet's last words were:

"End this nonsense."

There is another side to the question. A country not adequately defended may lose its liberty, which is more important even than public housing and unemployment. When there are no wolves visible the sheep probably believe that shepherds and sheep dogs are a waste of money. They change their minds when the wolf appears.

RUSSIA LOCKED up six English business men in Moscow, accusing them of sabotage, conspiracy against Russia's welfare, and Britain "expects a complete break with Russia."

However, Russia buys much machinery from Britain and gets credit from Britain, which puts trade first, and "petty annoyances" second. Britain will not allow any break with a good customer to last long.

STATE SEEKS SPEED ON BEER

Measure to 'Sidestep' Licensing Holiday Framed

PHILADELPHIA, March 18.—(AP.)—Even if it takes 60 days to set up the licensing machinery, State Representative Clinton Sowers said today there will be no "beer holiday" in Pennsylvania.

A plan being devised would permit beer to be sold as soon as federal modification of the Volstead act becomes effective, if the Legislature passes and the Governor signs the Sowers state beer control bill.

Sowers, chairman of the House Liquor Control Committee, said the bill would allow immediate beer trade on a brewery-to-consumer basis.

He explained that under this arrangement the beer drinker can have a dozen bottles or a quarter of a keg of beer delivered to his home.

Sowers said "the procedure under the bill would be for the brewer to obtain his license from the State Treasurer's office."

SPEED BY CONGRESS

WASHINGTON, March 18.—(AP.)—A beer bill on the law books by Monday night was the aim of congressional leaders today as they arranged week-end conferences to help decide whether the new beverage would contain 3.2 or 3.05 per cent alcohol.

The conferences were necessary because the F use had refused to accept Senate amendments reducing the alcoholic content, adding wines and prohibiting the sale of the drinks to youths under 16.

House conferees already were at work, formally, but the Senate could not officially name its representatives in the effort to compromise because it had not been in session since Thursday.

Leaders knew, however, who the Senate conferees would be. Consequently, they made arrangements for the informal discussions so Congressional action could be completed early Monday.

What would result, of course, nobody could predict ahead of time. Some House conferees stood squarely for the stronger brew while Pat Harrison, of Mississippi, representing the Senate, withheld public expression of his position. It was Harrison who proposed the Senate amendment reducing the alcohol to 3.05.

Dr. Luther Named Ambassador to U.S.

BERLIN, March 18.—(AP.)—Dr. Hans Luther, who resigned the presidency of the Reichsbank last Tuesday, was appointed German ambassador to the United States today to succeed Friedrich Wilhelm von Prittwitz.

Dr. Luther was chancellor of Germany for brief terms in 1925 and 1926. In 1923 he was minister of finance. He became president of the Reichsbank in April, 1930, and his predecessor, Dr. Hjalmar Schacht, became president again this week when Dr. Luther resigned.

New 'Huck Finn' Rescued From Swollen River

CHARLEROI, Pa., March 18.—(INS.)—Huckleberry Finn's stealthy departure from home to escape the wrath of his "pap" was re-enacted in melodramatic—and near-tragic—fashion on the swollen Monongahela River today.

Out of the wisps of fog floating over the river, two locktenders at Lock No. 4 saw a runaway skiff carrying a bedraggled 10-year-old boy suddenly emerge this morning.

The stern of the craft swung endwise against the outside wall of the dam momentarily—just long enough for the locktenders to grab the boy and pull him to safety.

The skiff went over the dam and was smashed to matchwood.

Replying to a query, the boy said:

"Skeered? Course I'm not skeered—I've been on that there river a hunnert times."

The river is now at a 25-foot stage and considered too dangerous for navigation by experienced rivermen.

Questioning of the boy revealed the Huckleberry Finn sidelight. He said:

"My name is William—jest William. I ain't tellin' my last name. I hail from Roscoe, about five miles up-river.

"Well, last night just before I went to bed, my pap told me the first thing he was goin' to do this morning was to give me a dad-blamed good lickin'.

"I woke up early this morning and couldn't see much sense in just layin' there, waitin' for a lickin', so I got up and mom, she made me a couple of sandwiches and I just snuck out of the house."

STUDENT DIES IN AUTO CRASH

A fellow student, William Craig, 21, of 410 East Chestnut street, Washington, is in Mercy Hospital in a critical condition suffering from a probable fracture of the skull.

Two girl companions of the students, Miss Dorothy Slicker, 20, of 215 North Wade avenue, and Miss Myra Rigele, 22, of Thayer street, Washington, escaped injury.

The tragedy climaxed a St. Patrick's Day dance held last night at the New Penn Barbecue on the Library road, said to be a popular rendezvous for Washington and Jefferson students.

Pope Pius to Grant MacDonald Audience

LONDON, March 18.—(INS.)—Pope Pius will grant an audience to Prime Minister MacDonald and Foreign Minister Sir John Simon tomorrow morning, an Exchange Telegraph dispatch from Rome said today.

Abruzzi, Once Rumored Elkins Suitor, Dies

ROME, March 18.—(INS.)—News of the death in Italian Somaliland of the Duke of the Abruzzi, cousin of King Victor Emmanuel and center of a famous international romance a quarter of a century ago, was received in Rome today. He was 55.

From 1907 to 1913, society of two continents expected an engagement to be announced between the Duke and Katherine Elkins, daughter of the late Senator Stephen B. Elkins, of West Virginia.

The couple was seen together frequently, and reports of an impending betrothal persisted for years despite denials from both sides. Miss Elkins later married William F. R. Hitt, of Illinois. The Duke remained a bachelor.

The duke, who received part of his education at Harvard University, was a member of many Italian geographical societies and was known as the first person to climb St. Elias Mountain in Alaska, a feat he accomplished in 1897. He later published a book describing the ascent.

He organized a North Pole expedition at the turn of the century and participated in expeditions to the Himalayas, Central Africa and Somaliland.

He served as commander-in-chief of the Italian navy from 1915 to 1917.

HOLLYWOOD, March 18.—Some time today, Joan Crawford will slip away to a quiet retreat where there is nothing to remind her of a romance that has come to an end. The only person to know the secret of her destination will be Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., the boy whom she married almost four years ago and from whom she is parting freinds.

For months, Hollywood has rumored the separation of this famous pair, but it was not until yesterday that they confirmed the reports. Miss Crawford said:

"We call this a trial separation, but I doubt if we ever come together again.

"But please, this suit against Douglas has nothing whatever to do with our decision. He is innocent, the victim of a plot and Mr. Fitts (the District Attorney) will protect him. Needless to say, I will help him any way I can.

"There is no other man or woman in our case. We are just two people who are unhappy together. For a year we have

THIEVES OPEN CHURCH SAFE

A few hours after thieves broke into the Brushton Methodist Episcopal Church, 7810 Kelly street, an armed robber held up an Atlantic and Pacific grocery store at North Homewood avenue and Race street, in the same district today.

The thieves forced a window of the church and knocked the combination off a safe, but obtained nothing. The attempted burglary was discovered by George Morley, the janitor.

An armed white man entered the A. & P. store while Samuel W. Lewis, the manager, was alone. Covering Lewis with his gun, the robber took $25 from the cash register and fled to an automobile in which another man was waiting in front of the store.

Mellon on Ocean, Breakfasts in Bed

ABOARD S. S. LEVIATHAN, March 18.—(INS.)—Andrew W. Mellon, retiring American Ambassador to London, now on his way home, began the first full day of his sea voyage by taking breakfast in bed this morning.

He retired early last night, saying he was exhausted after yesterday's leave-taking ceremonies at Southampton.

Cermak Will Leaves Estate of $250,000

CHICAGO, March 18.—(AP.)—An estate valued at $250,000 was bequeathed to charities and to the family of the late Mayor Anton J. Cermak in his will, filed today in Probate Court.

Slays Three Children, Self at Wife's Grave

Names of Father's Victims Already On Tombstone

PHILADELPHIA, March 18.—(AP.)—Gilbert Friend, 28-year-old railway mail clerk, of Plant City, Fla., and his three young children were found shot to death today at the grave of his wife in suburban Upper Darby.

The bodies of the children lay close together on the mother's grave, a blanket covering all but their heads. Each had been shot through the heart, police said.

NAMES ON TOMBSTONE

Police said they learned Friend's wife, Marianne, had died on January 5 at the age of 26. The children were brought here a week ago.

The names of the three children and Friend were found inscribed on the headstone of the wife's grave, authorities said.

Police expressed the opinion Friend, grief-stricken over his wife's death, had slain the children and himself.

The note found in his car read:

"I must go to join her whom we love so greatly. I do as I believe right about our children, considering the fact that I must go. May God forgive me if I be wrong."

BOY SOUGHT ESCAPE

"In the light of our flashlights we could see the little bodies all in a line across the grave, with a blanket over them."

Bower said marks near the grave indicated the girl had been killed first, that the oldest boy had tried to escape and was shot about 15 feet away. Bower added:

"I think Friend shot the boy and carried him back, placing him beside his sister's body. Then he killed the baby and himself."

Youngstown Bid to Bucs Rejected

Sam E. Watters, vice president and secretary of the Pittsburgh Pirates, today admitted receiving an invitation from Mayor Mark Moore, of Youngstown, to play their Sunday games in the Ohio city as a result of the Pennsylvania Blue Law ban.

The Pirates, however, have been forced to decline the offer to use Evans Field in Youngstown for Sunday games. League rules prevent major league clubs from using outside fields for games.

INVITED TO OHIO

YOUNGSTOWN, O., March 18.—(INS.)—The Pittsburgh Pirates were invited to play their Sunday baseball games in Youngstown because of the Pennsylvania Blue Law ban in a letter in the mails to the Pirate management today from Mayor Mark Moore.

Indian Sentenced In Bride Slaying

READING, March 18.—(AP.)—Chief Running Wolf, who Gen. Pelham D. Glassford said was a leader of the B. E. F., today was sentenced to six to 12-year term in the Eastern Penitentiary on a conviction of killing his estranged bride.

Cashier's Suicide to Aid Bank Held Needless

NEW WILMINGTON, Pa., March 18.—(AP.)—R. S. Mercer, president of the First National Bank of New Wilmington, said today that the suicide of Howell I. Getty, 58, in an attempt to help the bank was "unnecessary."

He asserted that the bank is in good condition and expects to be permitted to reopen Monday for full operations.

Getty, cashier of the bank, killed himself late yesterday, leaving a notice which said:

"The $50,000 insurance policy which the bank holds on my life will pay the depreciation on the bond account and allow the bank to reopen."

Mercer said there was no shortage in Getty's accounts. Getty, in charge of the bank's investments, is said to have worried over the fact that some of the investments have depreciated.

TRUST COMPANY OPENS HERE

A license to reopen the Allegheny Trust Company has been granted by the Federal Reserve Bank of Cleveland. Business will be conducted as usual, with no restrictions upon withdrawals in savings or checking accounts.

The First National Bank and Trust Company of Waynesburg and the Marine National Bank of Erie were at the same time given permission to resume business, with no limitations imposed.

The Allegheny Trust Company was one of the three Federal Reserve member banks which did not open Tuesday. However, President Roosevelt announced last week the fact that the opening of any bank was delayed should not be taken as a measure of its soundness, as detailed examination of their business requires time.

The First Savings and Trust Company of Derry, Pa., has been authorized to open with withdrawals restricted to 10 per cent of deposits by the State Department of Banking. The restriction does not apply to deposits made after the beginning of the new holiday.

Directors of the First National Bank of Beaver Falls have asked the Comptroller of the Currency to appoint a conservator.

Secretary of Banking William D. Gordon declared last night that the 54 state banks not licensed to reopen will be placed on a restricted withdrawal basis early next week.

Other banks in Western Pennsylvania not yet opened are being examined and early announcement of their status is expected.

KLINE PETITIO UP MONDAY

The Pennsylvania Supre Court on Monday will conside Mayor Kline's petition to remit his case to Judge Thomas D. Finletter, in his attempt to resign in return for elimination of a six-months jail term.

Chief Justice Robert S. Frazer, of the Supreme Court, received the petition and will formally present it to his colleagues when the court convenes here Monday.

Kline's plea to escape the jail sentence is based upon ill health. His prosecutor is convinced that he is really ill, but plans to ask Judge Finletter to appoint a commission of three physicians—a neurologist, a general practitioner and a heart specialist—to examine the Mayor, if the Supreme Court grants Kline's petition.

President of Council John S. Herron will automatically succeed to the Mayor's office for 20 days, if Kline resigns. At the end of that time Council will elect a new mayor.

Roosevelt to Get Detroit Bank Facts

WASHINGTON, March 18.—(INS.)—The Detroit banking situation, involving the closing of the two biggest financial institutions in the city, will be laid directly before President Roosevelt, it was learned today.

Meanwhile declaring a congressional investigation alone could dispel the mystery surrounding the First National, Guardian Trust Bank closings in Detroit, Representative Dingell (Dem.), of Michigan, today appealed to House Democratic leaders to sanction the inquiry.

PINCHOT URGES VOTERS PROD ASSEMBLY TO PASS RELIEF

MACHINE RULE OF LAWMAKERS DENOUNCED

Starvation, Disorders Seen as Result of 'Selfish Politics'

HARRISBURG, March 18.—(AP.)—Gov. Gifford Pinchot last night charged that Republican organization leaders in the Legislature have neglected the unemployed to legislate beer and Sunday baseball. He said:

"They have been too busy about beer and Sunday baseball and jobs to give attention to the biggest and most important thing in the whole state—unemployment relief.

"In Washington you have the spectacle of the Congress of the United States forgetting all politics, throwing aside every political consideration, and thinking only of the good of the country—and you see the result.

'NOTHING BUT POLITICS'

"In Harrisburg you have the spectacle of the Republican organization thinking of nothing but politics, letting the public interest—your interest, the interest of the unemployed, the interest of the whole commonwealth—go hang for political reasons. And unless you take a hand you will see the result—disgrace for the commonwealth, starvation for the millions, and disorder and bloodshed in Pennsylvania.

"I ask you to get in touch at once with your Senator and your Representative and let your will be known."

There are almost 2,000,000 people in the state in need of relief, he said, who will not be cared for by the state after the next two weeks unless the Legislature provides relief funds in that time. He said:

"I do not believe the people of this commonwealth have ever had before such a perfect picture of machine politics as this, or such perfect proof that the organization is utterly careless of their interests and only anxious for its own advantage. The organization has been too busy with politics to pay attention to relief."

TAX REDUCTION URGED

He said that next to the unemployed the biggest question before the Legislature is the taxpayers "who are in danger of losing their homes or their farms because they can't pay their taxes." He said local taxes should be reduced.

Restating his program for relief of taxpayers and provision of relief funds by changing the methods of collecting mercantile, inheritance and personal property taxes, he said this would reduce the local taxpayers' burden by $30,000,000 and leave $20,000,000 for relief of the jobless. He declared:

"I think my plan is a good plan, but I am perfectly willing to accept anybody else's plan that will do for the taxpayers and the unemployed what my plan will do.

"But any plan that fails to provide money for unemployment relief when it is needed will have to be passed over my veto."

Asserting the organization looks coolly on his plan because the changes recommended would deprive the organization of its mercantile tax appraisers, he said:

"I am not interested in jobs."

STATE REVENUE INQUIRY ON

HARRISBURG, March 18.—(AP.)—Official Pennsylvania today pored over the estimates of the state's probable 1933-35 revenues for a solution of the problems of relief, economies and appropriations.

Gov. Pinchot, who three months ago said the income for the next biennium will be $158,000,000, is going to ask the Department of Revenue for a re-check of those figures.

Legislative leaders, expressing belief that the Governor's forecast is too high, asserted the revenues are more likely to be around the $150,000,000 mark.

The Governor has recommended appropriations of $138,000,000 to operate the various state departments. This sum is $34,000,000 under the budget for the current biennium.

This week the Sterling committee on state finances recommended reductions of $13,000,000 to $21,000,000 below the Governor's proposals.

E. J. KAUFMANN EXPLAINS PLAN

Edgar J. Kaufmann, president of Kaufmann Department Stores, Inc., in a radio address last night from station WJAS said the plan recently devised by Pittsburghers to give work to thousands of unemployed here was not theoretical, but plain, comprehensive and practical.

He said:

The work dollar is a more potent and better dollar than the dole dollar. Under our plan it is arranged to gradually turn the stream of governmental moneys advanced by Federal and state funds so it will be applied in payment for work to be performed and materials to be used by the existing "frozen labor" to rehabilitate the state and the country."

He said congressional action is sought before it adjourns.

Legion Head Pledges Faith in Roosevelt

AMARILLO, Tex., March 18.—(AP.)—Louis A. Johnson, national commander of the American Legion, addressing a rally of legionnaires here last night, expressed belief that veterans' relief and the legion's program of rehabilitation would not suffer at the hands of President Roosevelt. He said:

"I have the utmost confidence in the President's fairmindedness, and I don't believe his efforts toward economy will cause him to cripple the work that is being done to help casualties—those for whom the war will never end."

Topley Sends Check For Salary Refund

Clerk of Courts Samuel J. Topley closely followed Controller Robert G. Woodside in returning to the county, 15 per cent of his salary for the first half of March. They were the only officials up to today to make returns to the county under the agreement to accept salary reductions. Each sent his personal check for $62.50 with the request that it go to the general fund of the county.

Both made it plain that their refunds were voluntary and that they waived legal right to that portion of their salaries.

FLOOD RECEDES IN WHEELING

WHEELING, W. Va., March 18.—(AP.)—Yellow water today was giving way to yellow mud along the shores of the Ohio River as the stream, swollen to flood stage by recent rains, gradually receded.

Rail and highway transportation, disrupted temporarily in this section, was resumed yesterday and residents of Wheeling Island—a ward of the city located on an island in mid-river—washed dirt and sediment from their walks and porches.

FRENCH MOVE TO PAY REVIVED

PARIS, March 18.—(AP.)—Payment of the $19,000,000 interest owed the United States since last December 15 was proposed today in a resolution presented in the Chamber of Deputies by Rene Richard, Radical Socialist deputy.

The action definitely forced the problem before parliament and the government for the first time since the overthrow of the Herriot cabinet the morning before the due date.

The American crisis was given as "a new fact" demanding a display of international solidarity as France's duty in the preamble to the resolution.

Richards action suddenly crystallized the movement led by former Premier Herriot and supported by former Premier Painleve and others with the tacit encouragement of the government.

M. Richard's friends said the resolution was presented in accord with the views of M. Herriot, who wrote today in a Lyons newspaper, "We Must Pay."

Firm Will Restore Salary Reduction

NEW YORK, March 18.—(INS.)—Declaring that the constructive legislation being put into effect by the national administration would soon result in greater business activities, J. D. Tew, president of the B. F. Goodrich Company, today had announced that all salaried employes of the company will be restored to rates effective prior to March 6.

FARM AID BILL PASSAGE SEEN AFTER BATTLE

$800,000,000 Food Tax Provision Arouses City Opposition

By WILLIAM S. NEAL
International News Service.

WASHINGTON, March 18.—Administration officials today expressed gratification over the reception accorded the emergency farm relief bill in Congress.

Although there was a strong sentiment in Congress to abandon the dizzy pace of the past week, it appeared probable that the farm bill would be brought before the House early next week and passed.

CONGRESS CO-OPERATES

Secretary of Agriculture Wallace, who would be given extraordinary power to enforce reduction of acreage to lift prices, appeared before both Senate and House agricultural committees. He said:

"I was highly gratified with the fine spirit of co-operation expressed. It is the same spirit which has marked all of the conferences on this subject."

Dictatorial features of the bill aroused suspicion in the minds of many members, but Secretary Wallace told the House committee that most of these provisions were merely reserve power which would never be invoked.

The House Agriculture Committee went into session early today in an effort to whip the bill into shape.

Six national farm organizations today urged speedy passage of the measure in a letter sent to all members of Congress.

Bitter opposition from many representatives of big industrial centers on the ground that the bill would increase the cost of food, was expected. The same opposition, however, failed to stop passage of the domestic allotment bill in the House.

$800,000,000 TAX

Secretary Wallace admitted to members of the Senate committee that the processing tax probably would amount to $800,000,000 a year.

If, as expected, the bill raises the buying power of the farmer, the big cities and industrial sections will benefit from increased employment, he added.

Objections were raised to provisions of the bill authorizing the Secretary to limit all agencies handling food in interstate commerce, extending even to the lowest middleman. This power, the Secretary told the House committee, probably would never be invoked.

The packers, millers and other handlers of food raised the same objection to the measure that they raised to the allotment bill. They would be forced to carry a tremendous load in financing their products until the processing tax is collected. It was to meet this objection that the Reconstruction Finance Corporation was authorized to make loans to them.

CITY AWAITING BEER ACTION

Awaiting word from Harrisburg as to who may sell beer once it is legalized by Congress, prospective retailers today were making tentative plans to obtain new quarters or enlarge those they now occupy.

Definite information will not be had until a liquor control measure passes the Legislature and is signed by the Governor. A bill setting up the machinery for distributing the beer will be introduced in the Legislature Monday night.

Men who went out of the hotel business with the advent of prohibition are seeking to return. One who operated a Braddock hotel in pre-prohibition days and then disposed of it is considering returning to his old establishment. Real estate dealers saw in the return of beer more favorable conditions generally for the real estate business.

It had been announced previously that Il Duce would be unable to go to Ostia because of the pressure of domestic affairs.

But he left a cabinet meeting abruptly when the time for the arrival neared and drove to Ostia in a high-powered motor car, reaching the seaport just a few minutes before the British visitors arrived from Genoa in a seaplane piloted by Gen. Italo Balbo, Italian Air Minister.

In order to lose no time, Mussolini dressed for the reception before attending the cabinet meeting. He appeared in a morning coat and silk hat, and informed the cabinet it would have to transact its business speedily to enable him to get away and welcome the British statesmen.

IMPRESSIVE SCENE

Brilliant sunshine enhanced the impressive scene when the seaplane swooped down and skimmed along the smooth surface of Ostia harbor.

Escorted by nine military planes, Balbo piloted the craft to a beautiful landing, and then taxied the seaplane to the pier where the reception committee was awaited. Premier Mussolini was flanked by the British ambassador and his wife, and a large company of army and air officers, in full dress uniforms and decorations, stood at attention behind them.

As the visitors disembarked, Mussolini stepped forward. With his face wreathed in smiles, he handed a bouquet to Miss MacDonald. The Governor of Rome did likewise.

Mussolini then shook Premier MacDonald's hand and asked him in English whether he had enjoyed the flight from Genoa.

ENTER MOTOR CARS

Joined by other planes from the Ostia base, the aerial escort staged a picturesque display over the harbor as the party entered waiting motor cars for the drive to Rome.

Trumpeters blew a fanfare as the visitors took their places. Premier MacDonald and the British Ambassador entered the first car. Sir John Simon and Miss MacDonald traveled in the second, while Mussolini and Gen. Balbo brought up the rear.

GAS CONSUMERS TO GET NEW RATE CUT

Second Utility Co. To Announce Slash, Its President Says

A second victory for consumers in the battle with the local natural gas companies for reductions in rates was seen in the announcement by George W. Ratcliffe, president of the Manufacturers Light and Heat Company, of a new schedule of lower rates to be made public within a few days.

He said:

"Our accounting and rate-making departments have been studying this question for a long time, compiling data upon which our decisions must be based. As soon as we have completed the final checkup of these figures we shall make our new schedule public."

The Utilities League for Municipalities, which carried the fight to the gas companies, is credited by many consumers as being largely responsible for this reduction and the one put into effect several days ago by the Peoples National Gas Company giving consumers of more than 15,000 cubic feet of gas monthly a cut of 25 per cent in their rate.

In the past the rates of the two companies have been nearly identical and it is assumed that this percentage will be closely followed by Ratcliffe's organization.

STRIKERS PUSH WAGE DEMAND

A committee of striking workmen of the Federal Enameling and Stamping Company, of McKees Rocks, was to appear before officials of the company today with a petition demanding higher wages.

The action was decided last night at an organization meeting, attended by 400 of the men and women who walked out yesterday after company officials refused their demand.

Blaming the strike on Communist, C. E. Christman, the president, shut down the plant yesterday. Communist influence was denied at last night's meeting.

The strikers seek elimination of the group system which they maintain restricts their earnings. By the plan, if the workman's output is not up to the required standard, he is only paid for the work done regardless of the hours, they assert.

Weather Conditions.

The western disturbance is central over Kansas (Wichita, 29.46) and covers most of the interior of the country, with precipitation from the plateau to the Appalachians and from Canada to Texas. It is snowing this morning in the Rocky Mountains, the northern plains and upper lakes, and raining over the Ohio and Central Mississippi valleys. High pressure areas are central over Western Ontario and Manitoba (Winnipeg, 30.42), and over the plateau district (Boise, Idaho, 30.30). It is warmer over the Middle and Lower Mississippi Valley, the Ohio Valley and most of the eastern states, and slightly colder over the upper lakes and portions of the northern plains.

River Conditions.

The rivers are falling. Stage at Franklin is 7.1 feet; Parkers Landing, 8.0 feet; Lock No. 7 (Mon.), 17.4; Pittsburgh, 19.6; Dam No. 4, 19.7; No. 6, 22.7; No. 10, 27.6, and No. 12, 30.1. Rain has set in over the district this morning, and indications are that there will be sufficient rainfall to at least stop the fall in the rivers at Pittsburgh by Sunday morning.

Roosevelt Made Plans Year Ago, Aide Says

CINCINNATI, March 18.—(AP.)—Dr. Raymond Moley, adviser to President Roosevelt and an Assistant Secretary of State, told a forum of business and professional men last night that the actions of the President in the past 10 days are a vindication of the constitutional form of government. He said:

"Nothing the President has done is unconstitutional. He merely shows how adaptable to conditions our form of government really is."

The President's plans, bearing fruit in the measures sent in quick succession to Congress, are the result of long and careful preparation, Dr. Moley revealed in an aside. Work on them began quietly more than a year ago, he said, when the then candidate for President began making ready against his possible election.

Dr. Moley, former professor of political science at Columbia University, spoke before the forum under the sponsorship of the University of Cincinnati. He emphasized that he spoke only for himself, because "President Roosevelt needs no spokesman."

In answering questions asked by his hearers, he said that steps will be taken shortly to unify governmental agencies making farm loans; and that the administration's theory of tariff reform is not to "lop off the top of the wall," but to "make doorways in the wall opposite doorways in other walls."

W. C. T. U. Warns Beer Perils Girlish Figure

CHICAGO, March 18.—(Universal)—The W. C. T. U. attacked beer from a new angle today—on the ground that it will destroy "that girlish figure."

After declaring the belief that the beer bill is unconstitutional, a statement from the national headquarters said:

"If women take to the beer habit, they have only to look at some of the beer drinkers in the London slums to see what is ahead of them.

'WHEAT KING'S' WIDOW NEAR COLLAPSE

International News Service.

CHICAGO, March 18.—Trapped by Evanston police as he sought to carry out a $50,000 extortion plot against Mrs. James A. Patten, widow of the multi-millionaire "wheat king," Axel Peterson, a landscape gardener, today was under a close police guard.

Mrs. Patten, unnerved by the series of five threatening letters demanding the money, was in a serious physical condition at her home in suburban Evanston. For two weeks the aged widow's palatial home has been under special guard.

A score of police and detectives under Chief of Police William O. Freeman were hidden about the Patten home last night at the hour appointed in the last threat letter for payment of the cash. The letter instructed the widow to meet the writer on the street and pay over the $50,000.

SUSPECTS TRAP

Policewoman Vera Everett, garbed in Mrs. Patten's clothes and carrying a revolver and two dummy packages of money, left the widow's home as Peterson approached. Suspecting a trap, the 55-year-old gardener turned and went to his home three blocks away, where he was arrested by a police squad.

At police headquarters Peterson admitted writing the extortion letters, adding that he needed $8,000 to save his home from foreclosure. After signing a confession the gardener made an unsuccessful attempt to kill himself by slashing his wrists.

Evanston police planned to turn Peterson over to federal authorities for prosecution inasmuch as the five letters were sent through the mails from a Chicago substation.

Peterson had been employed as a landscape gardener by several prominent Evanston residents, including Charles G. Dawes, former vice president, and the Pattens.

DEMANDS 'LOAN'

The gardener's letters demanded the $50,000 as a "loan" to be paid back in 1935. In one of the extortion notes the writer referred to his acquaintanceship with the late James Patten.

Peterson's second letter said that "the gang are on guard," and a subsequent note warned that if the wealthy widow informed the police "it would go too bad for you." The fourth note informed Mrs. Patten that "a pineapple is ready."

Although shocked to the point of collapse, the 75-year-old widow summoned authorities and turned the letters over to detectives. The special guard which has been maintained at the Patton mansion since the first note arrived was withdrawn last night.

AUTOS COLLIDE, 4 MEN HURT

Four men were in Homeopathic Hospital today with injuries suffered when two automobiles collided at Beechwood boulevard and Forward avenue late yesterday.

The injured, according to a police report, were Homer Everson, 60, of the Pittsburgh Athletic Association, driver of one of the cars, and Felix Salgado, 29, of 42 McClure avenue, Homestead; Mike Parakakis, 29, and Louis Serbolis, 21, both of 611 Evans avenue, McKeesport, occupants of the other. Everson suffered a possible fracture of the skull, Salgado a spinal injury and the others lacerations and bruises.

A third automobile was damaged when struck by Everson's machine, the detectives said.

Wife Asks $50,000 From 'Other Woman'

Mrs. Florence Guthrie, of 39 Millbridge street, is asking $50,000 for the loss of her husband's affections, in a suit filed against Anna M. Scholz, formerly of Chestnut street and Spring Garden avenue.

Mrs. Guthrie declared she and her husband had lived happily until he met the other woman in 1925. Then, the wife said, his affection for her waned and he left her in 1929.

6 FEARED LOST IN BLIZZARD

DENVER, COL., March 18.—(AP.)—A Catholic priest, two nuns and three students were sought today by posses after it was reported they might be lost in a blizzard raging in the mountains near Idaho Springs, 45 miles west of here.

The party left Idaho Springs by motorcar for Denver yesterday and had not arrived here today. A heavy snow started falling late in the afternoon.

In the party were the Rev. C. M. Johnson, assistant rector of the Cathedral of the Immaculate Conception; Sisters Ethelbert and Finnian, members of the faculty of the Cathedral High School, and Ida Donato, John Callahan and Josephine Fitzsimmons, students. They had gone to Idaho Springs from Denver to participate in a debate.

Faces W. Va. Court In Auto Theft Here

WHEELING, W. Va., March 18.—Patrick O'Hara, alias Pat Collins, is to face trial here in Federal Court for a theft of an auto in Pittsburgh six years ago. He was arrested in Detroit. Located in Detroit February 24, he made a spectacular escape by leaping from a second story window. He broke a leg in the leap, but outdistanced officers by boarding a taxicab. Later he was arrested. The indictment charges O'Hara with stealing a coupe in Pittsburgh from W. R. Allison and driving it to Vienna, W. Va.

Wreck Halts Trains From Washington

Hundreds of commuters between Pittsburgh and Washington, Pa., were held up for more than an hour and a half today, due to a freight blockade on the single track of the Washington branch of the Pennsylvania Railroad.

A car in a freight train jumped the track in a cut near Arden station and turned crosswise in the cut at 4:15 a. m. Some of the local trains were more than an hour and a half getting through to Pittsburgh. Normal traffic was restored at 9 a. m.

Snake Bites One Dentist, Tooth Hits Another

CLEVELAND, March 18.—(AP.)—Rajah, an eight-and-a-half-foot Indian Rock python of Brookside Zoo, had an aching tooth pulled last night, but it took four men to hold him and he bit the "dentist."

Gerhard F. Siemen, former field representative and collector of reptiles for the New York Biological Society, did the extracting while his helpers kept a firm hold on the writhing serpent. Siemen was bitten on the right hand in the midst of the operation.

ERIE, Pa., March 18.—(AP.)—While tugging on a stubborn molar, which Dr. Wesley Cook, dentist, sought to remove from a patient's jaw, the tooth broke and a piece struck the dentist in the right eye. Physicians hope to save the sight of the injured optic.

Starts Year Term For Burning House

been on the verge of a break. We have only been saving our announcement until both of us were finished with pictures.

"Last Sunday we agreed for Douglas to move to his grandmother's over this week-end. My picture is finished and his is being completed tonight. It is unfortunate that the suit had to be filed at this time, but there was no use in delaying our announcement."

Confirmation of this was given by Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., over the telephone from the Lasky ranch where he was making the final scenes of his film. He said:

"For a long time Joan and I have been searching for a way to make this announcement. Perhaps the separation is only temporary. Certainly we will continue to be friends."

Bearing this out both Joan and Doug tell of having a date together next week. Joan said:

"He called me up and asked me to go out with him, and, of course, I agreed."

Meanwhile Doug, Jr., spent last night at the home of a friend. He hasn't decided yet where he will live. Perhaps he, too, will go away for a while.

The young actor renewed his denials of the charges made by Jorgen Dietz in a $50,000 balm suit filed against him.

Both he and Joan also denied there was any prospect of immediate divorce.

The romance between the two, once hailed as filmdom's happiest match, culminated in their marriage in New York, June 3, 1929. At that time, neither had attained their present degree of fame, but both were rising young players.

Joan now is one of the most popular stars on the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer lot, while Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., is an important player under the Warner Brothers' banner.

Erie Term of U. S. Court Opens Monday

Approximately 170 cases, mostly liquor violations, will go before the federal grand jury when the spring court term opens Monday in Erie. Twenty-six pleas of guilty will be entered and 42 cases will go to trial.

Headed by U. S. Attorney Louis Graham, virtually the entire federal staff of attorneys and clerks will move to Erie. There are 69 civil cases listed.

Auto Death Enacted With Toys Frees 2

HARRISBURG, March 18.—(AP.)—A toy automobile collided with a toy truck on a table in the Coroner's office. A short time later Philip A. Rothenberg, 17, and Archie Fortney, 29, were exonerated in the death of Roy M. Hatfield, a railroader.

The miniature cars were used to re-enact the accident, which cost Hatfield his life.

MAURICE PACKS FOR PARIS TRIP

HOLLYWOOD, March 18.—(INS.)—Sudden decision of Maurice Chevalier, French motion picture star, to make a rush trip to Paris caused speculation here today.

Chevalier and his wife recently obtained a "mutual consent" divorce decree in Paris. After the decree was granted both spoke of each other in the fondest terms and Hollywood wondered if the famous lover of the screen was hastening back to Paree to see Mme. Yvonne Vallee.

The screen star is sailing from New York Thursday night on the SS. Paris. He will leave Hollywood Monday night a few hours after his present picture is completed.

Chevalier has been seen much in the company of Marlene Dietrich, glamorous German film star, and has been attentive to Lillian Harvey, famous European cinema star, since her arrival in Hollywood.

Chickens, Potatoes Settle Non-Support

SCRANTON, Pa., March 18.—(INS.)—Stephen Sarik, Moscow farmer, haled into Nonsupport Court by his wife, said he had no cash to keep up payments and offered to substitute chickens and potatoes. Mrs. Sarik agreed and the Judge ordered Sarik to support her with poultry and potatoes until conditions improve.

ZANGARA LOSES BRAVADO

RAIFORD, Fla., March 18.—(AP.)—The boastful defiance of Giuseppe Zangara, who killed Mayor Anton Cermak, of Chicago, with a bullet intended for President Roosevelt, has given way to moody silence as he waits in the death cell here for electrocution.

With less than a week to live, Zangara has dropped his boasts and threats against "all presidents and kings" and keeps his own counsel. Aside from nods or grunts when he is spoken to he is silent now.

The little assassin refuses to see the prison chaplain. His cell is next door to the chamber where the electric chair awaits him.

ROME, March 18.—Giuseppe Zangara, Italian fanatic, who killed Mayor Anton J. Cermak, of Chicago, in an attempt to assassinate then President-elect Roosevelt, was linked today with a widespread radical terrorist organization in the United States.

Charges were also made directly to Premier Mussolini, of Italy, that Zangara and accomplices might have been responsible for the mailing of the bombs which wrecked the Easton (Pa.) Postoffice, killing three and injuring three others, on December 31, 1931.

INQUIRY BLASTS KREUGER FAKE SUICIDE TALE

Swedish Police Deny Dummy Cremated As Match King

STOCKHOLM, March 18.—Ivar Kreuger, Swedish "match king," is definitely and decidedly dead, and rumors that his suicide was faked are plain fantasy and nothing more, according to a special report by the police commission untangling the affairs of Kreuger here for almost a year.

The special report, which makes public for the first time the secret memoranda of the French police who investigated the suicide in Paris, is in answer to a persistent public suspicion that it was a wax dummy that was cremated here at final rites for the man who made a fortune from matches.

BODY SEEN BY SCORE

More than 20 persons, including Kreuger's private secretary, Karin Bokman, and several of his business associates, viewed the body before it was placed in a coffin, according to the report which points out that Kreuger was suspected of suicidal thoughts on his final journey from New York to Paris.

The French police contribut the testimony of the shop deal who sold Kreuger a pistol, a numerous details of the findi and the examination of the bo

IDENTIFIED BY FINGER

Miss Bokman, who on March 5, 1932, according to her testimony, received a letter from her employer inclosing three $10,000 bills and saying "Goodbye and thank you," declares she made positive identification of Kreuger by a deformed finger which was the result of a childhood accident.

Kreuger's business associates testified he appeared nervous and tired during his last hours, and admitted difficulty in keeping his thoughts in order, but gave no indication of suicidal intent.

FIND PROPERTY IN N. J.

JERSEY CITY, N. J., March 18.—(AP.)—Personal property of the late Ivar Kreuger, Swedish match king, valued at more than $100,000, was found stored yesterday in the vaults of the Goodman Warehouse here.

The discovery was made when the vault was opened on an order obtained from Vice Chancellor Fielder by the Irving Trust Company, of New York, trustee in bankruptcy for the International Match Company, one of the Kreuger corporations.

Among the articles recovered was a painting by Rubens, valued at $15,000, and another by Zorn, valued at $5,000, authorities said.

KILLING OF PAIR MYSTERY

County detectives today had found no trace of the slayers of Frank Kosulak, 70, and his wife, Kathryn, 65, whose bodies were found in the second floor bedroom of their home at Champion Hill, near Sturgeon, yesterday.

The bodies, battered with a coal miner's pick, were found by neighbors who had not seen the aged couple since Tuesday. The pick was found behind a stove.

A squad of detectives continued to search the countryside and question acquaintances of the couple. Two trunks had been ransacked. Cuts on the victims' hands and wrists led detectives to believe they were tortured in an effort to make them reveal the hiding place of their money.

Damage Award Won For Legless Girl

For the loss of both legs, Margaret Switala, 8, and her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Switala, South Side, were awarded a $42,000 verdict against the Pittsburgh Railways Company by a Common Pleas Court jury yesterday. The child was struck by a street car in Carson street, June 5, 1930.

Elmer B. Marsh, of Springdale, and his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur F. Marsh, were awarded a verdict of $17,109 against the Pennsylvania Railroad Company for the loss of the boy's right leg. The boy was thrown while boarding a train at Peterson Station, March 27, 1930.

GIRL EMPLOYES AT THE U. S. BUREAU OF ENGRAVING PRINTING, TRIMMING SHEETS INTO INDIVIDUAL NEW U. S. BILLS

'Secrets' of Uncle Sam's Money Factory Told

WASHINGTON, March 18.—(AP.)—With more money set in circulation by the country's tussle with the banking situation, the Bureau of Engraving has been forced to step up production to meet the demands upon it for currency.

In a normal year the bureau makes enough paper money to girdle the Equator four times.

It makes 2,200 acres of postage stamps yearly, using enough tapioca starch in them to supply all of Greater New York with dessert.

The 240 printing presses supply 12 banknotes every five seconds.

The bureau was set up in 1862 when production of the first paper currency—demand notes—began in this country.

At the start the chief had one room in the attic of the Treasury. He had five helpers. Now there are 5,000 employes and the plant covers 10 acres.

The vault where the dies and plates are stored is so surrounded by mirrors that a guard standing near the door can see not only all around the vault, but through a passage beneath it.

In another vault is stored tons of uncut sheets of money and bonds. There a person can pick up a 32-pound package containing $126,000,0000.

Mickey Mouse Caught In Hollywood Slash

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., March 18.—(AP.)—Complexities in the employment systems at Hollywood studios are giving the academy and producer committees some knotty problems to unravel as the movie plants proceed in securing signatures to the eight weeks' salary waivers.

The puzzling question of the amounts free-lance players should be expected to waive in the all-industry emergency sacrifice was debated and finally ironed out, but casting directors are being kept busy in figuring on individual cases.

The office of Lester Cowan, academy executive secretary, is almost constantly besieged with telephone calls from various studios seeking interpretation of the academy-producer agreement for special cases.

Not all are as light in vein as the question asked Walt Disney as to how the waiver would affect his own Mickey Mouse. The immediate verdict was:

"Half ration of cheese."

A stunt man who wrote an indignant reminder of the fact that "the life and limbs of a stunt man are worth as much today as they were yesterday," waiver or no waiver.

Another unusual case is that of the well-known leading man who, just prior to the crisis, had made a deal with a studio to play a role for one-half his regular salary. Now he wants to know:

"Already cut in half, is my salary going to be sliced again?"

SERMON SERIES BEING GIVEN IN BEN AVON

Mid-week Lenten services continue in churches throughout Pittsburgh. The Rev. J. Howard Brinckerhoff, installed last month as pastor of the Ben Avon Presbyterian Church is delivering a series of Wednesday evening services on "Highways of Triumph."

His subject for Wednesday will be "Goodness Triumphant." Special music is being presented at these services under the direction of Mrs. E. W. Flaccus, president of the Tuesday Musical.

Mr. Brinckerhoff

The Rev. Dr. Percy G. Kammerer, former dean of Trinity Cathedral, now Provost of Avon Old Farms School, Avon, Conn., will preach the Lenten noon-day services next week in Trinity. His general topic will be: "The Valley of Decision," and his sub-topics: "The Valley and the Mount;" "A Challenge to the Multitude;" "The Church of the Living God;" "Our Mount of Aspiration," and "Our Road to Victory."

The Rev. Dr. John Ray Ewers, of the East End Christian Church, will speak at the Lenten service to be held in Asbury Methodist Episcopal Church, Forbes street and Murray avenue, at 8 p. m., Thursday.

WEDNESDAY SERVICES

On Wednesday at 8 p. m., the Rev. John E. Nelson, of the Gustavus Adolphus Lutheran Church, Friendship avenue, will speak on "The Great Salvation."

On the same date and hour, the Rev. Dr. A. J. Holl will speak on "Far From Home" in the First Lutheran Church, Grant street.

Lenten services are being held Wednesday and Thursday evenings in the St. Matthew's Lutheran Church, North avenue, and in the Bethlehem Evangelical Church, Allentown.

DAN SMITH

Samson was very much in love despite the fact that the girl of Timnath was a Philistine. So his father gave in to the inevitable and arranged the marriage.

A great wedding feast was held in Timnath. Most of the guests were Samson's secret enemies. To 30 strong young Philistines Samson proposed a riddle and made a wager. If they guessed the riddle in seven days Samson was to give them 30 sheets and 30 changes of garments, but if they failed to guess it, Samson should collect a like number from them.

"This is the riddle," said Samson, "Out of the eater came forth meat and out of the strong came forth sweetness."

Missionary Alliance Conference to Open

THE REV. F. F. BOSWORTH

39th Meeting Starts Tomorrow—Many To Speak

The 39th annual Bible Conference and Missionary Convention of the Christian and Missionary Alliance of Pittsburgh and Western Pennsylvania begins tomorrow and continues until next Monday in the North Side Carnegie Hall.

Mr. McArthur

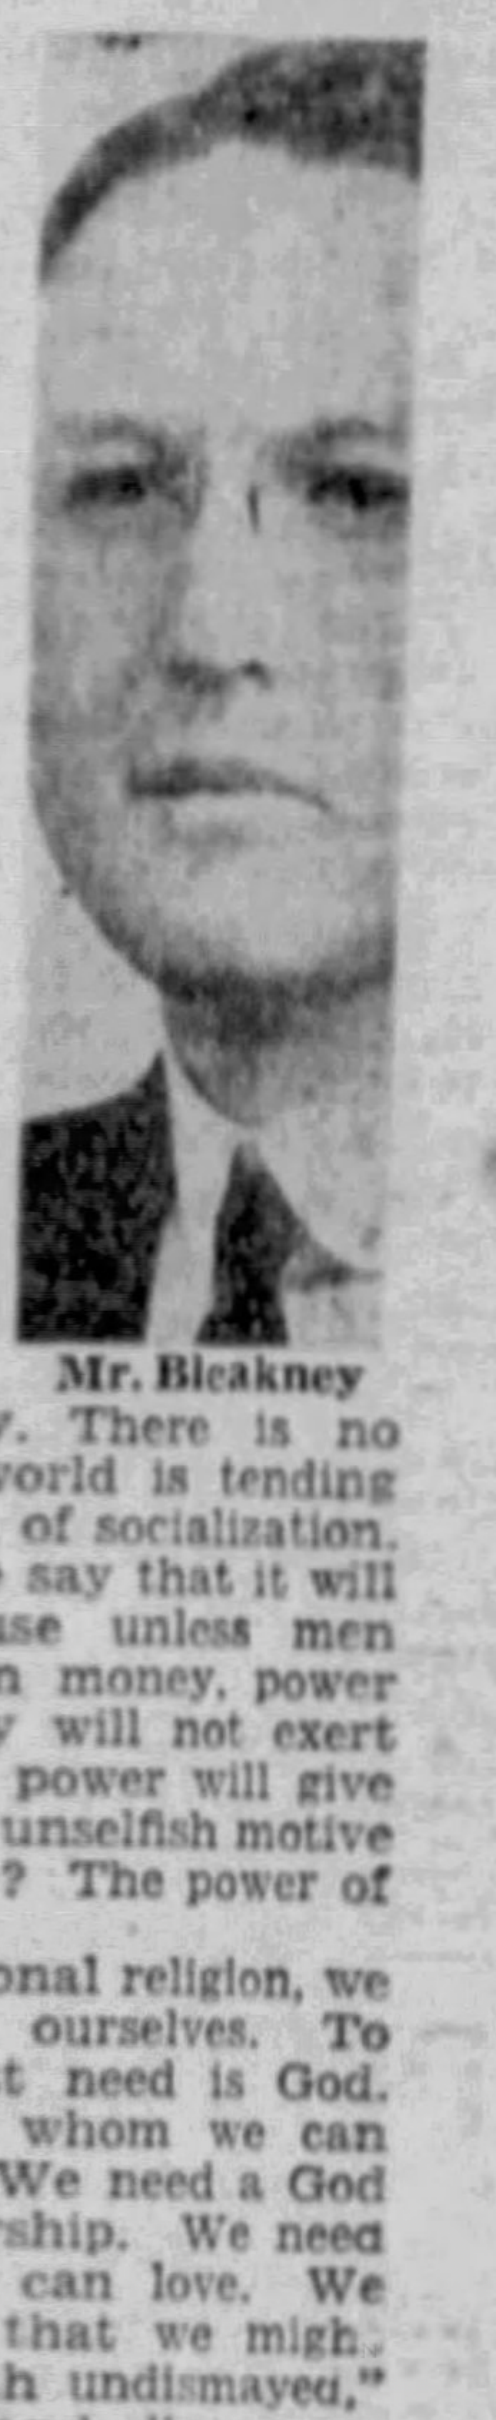
Speakers will include the Rev. H. M. Shuman, president, Christian and Missionary Alliance, New York; the Rev. David Mason, foreign secretary, New York; the Rev. William T. McArthur, evangelist, Philadelphia; the Rev. F. F. Bosworth, evangelist, River Forest, Ill.; the Rev. S. W. Garvey, eastern district superintendent; the Rev. H. L. Turner, Bible teacher.

STRESSES NEED OF PERSONAL RELIGION

This is the third in the series of Lenten sermonettes by Pittsburgh clergymen. It was written by the Rev. Edward Bleakney, of the Mt. Lebanon Baptist Church, and is entitled "Personal Religion."

During the Lenten Season, our thoughts naturally turn to religion. In these hard days, we need it more than ever.

We need to devolop personal religion because the depression has forced us back on ourselves. Most of the material things that we were building upon have been swept away. We are meeting obstacles that we never expected to face. Our faith is being tested as in no other day. In order to stand up to the difficulties that will enable us to face the very worst that the universe can do to us. We also need strong characters. To this end, we need personal religion.



Mr. Bleakney

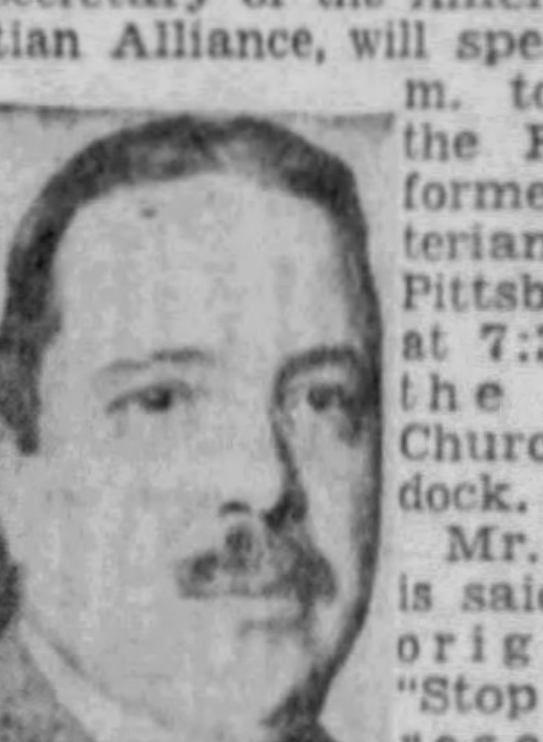
We need to develop personal religion so that we may substitute the creative for the selfish motive in society. There is no doubt that our world is tending toward some form of socialization. Many good people say that it will never work because unless men are highly paid in money, power and position, they will not exert themselves. What power will give men the high and unselfish motive to serve humanity? The power of religion.

To develop personal religion, we must begin with ourselves. To this end, our first need is God. We need a God whom we can trust absolutely. We need a God whom we can worship. We need a God whom we can love. We need a God "so that we might meet life and death undismayed," to live worthily and die as we should. We need a God to whom we can dedicate ourselves. We need a God in order to conserve human values.

We must search diligently for such a God. There is no better way than communion and fellowship with Him through prayer. Prayer is the essence of all religion. Nothing will strengthen our personal religion and character as quiet, thoughtful meditation and prayer.

W. H. ANDERSON TO SPEAK

William H Anderson, general secretary of the American Christian Alliance, will speak at 11 a. m. tomorrow in the First Reformer Presbyterian Church of Pittsburgh, and at 7:30 p. m. in the Reformed Church of Braddock.



Mr. Anderson

Mr. Anderson is said to have originated the "Stop Alien Representation" Amendment which recently failed to come to a vote in the House, although favorably reported by the Judiciary Committee in the last Congress. It has been introduced in the present emergency session of the new 73rd Congress by Senator Arthur Capper, of Kansas, and by Judge Malcolm C. Tarver, of Georgia, in the House.

He will discuss the proposed Amendment and the work of the Alliance tomorrow and will address the Union Ministerial Association of Pittsburgh on the same subject April 3.

Concert to Be Given At Beverly Heights

A concert presenting W. Arnold Davies, baritone, and Deloris De Martini, pianist, will be held at the Beverly Heights United Presbyterian Church, Washington road, at Rocklyn Place on Tuesday, March 21. The board of ushers of the church is sponsoring the event. Mr. Davies, baritone soloist at the Beverly Church, will be accompanied by Miss De Martini, who also will play a group of numbers.

Mr. Davies

Opera Stars, Stokowski On Air

If you're a radio-minded music lover, you're in luck tonight—for to all appearances the network moguls have conspired to deluge listeners with none-but-the-best in musical literature.

Beginning at 8:15, NBC and CBS, including their local outlets, WCAE, KDKA and WJAS, have scheduled four programs of top-notch caliber, the first two, opening simultaneously on KDKA and WJAS, respectively, being the Boston Symphony Orchestra, with Heinrich Gebhard, noted pianist, as guest artist, and the Philadelphia Orchestra under Stokowski.

Both concerts feature excerpts from Wagner's operatic works, the Boston organization offering, in addition, Roussel's Suite in F Major and d'Indy's Symphony on a French Mountain Air.

The air première of the sensuous Bacchanalian dances from LaMonaca's Hindu opera, "The Festival of Gauri," marks the Philadelphia program.

On WCAE at 9 the concluding concert of the Cleveland All-High School Orchestra's NBC-WEAF series is scheduled for 30 minutes.

On KDKA at 11:30, four stars from the Metropolitan Opera Company perform in solo, duet and quartet selections. The artists—Queena Mario, soprano; Gladys Swarthout, contralto; Mario Chamlee, tenor, and Frank Chapman, basso—supported by an all-string orchestra under the direction of Robert Armbruster, forsake their operatic pyrotechnics for a night to offer Stephen Foster's "Old Kentucky Home," "Camptown Races" and "Swanee River."

Globe-Trotting

With the Globe-Trotter of the Sun-Telegraph and Hearst Metrotone News

—By LOUIS L. KAUFMAN—

Hello, ladies and gentlemen:

Radio was bobbing in the foamy waves during that speedy beer session in the Senate. Senator Dill, author of much radio legislation, presented an amendment prohibiting the radio advertising of beer, arguing that it would cross state lines and invade dry states. The amendment was rejected. So dry states may have their powers of resistance tried as radio announcers, effervescent with words, describe the merit of their product.

Well, old timers, here's a chance to come to the aid of a floundering fellow. Too much river water in the day's mail and we can't breast the current.

Who knows what year we had the highest river, and who will contribute a few details about it? William Mack wants to know and although one can go to the books to find out the answer, what's the use? It never meets with your approval, because in every question like this someone remembers "'way back when" it was different.

People are getting careless with their teeth. Yesterday a plate was picked up on Bennet street in Homewood and today Arthur Arnold, of 830 Concord street, found one gnawing at the sidewalk on East street near Suisman street, North Side.

A. J. Veraldi, puzzle wizard, admits that the monkey and the cocoanut problem was too much for him but he did untangle the skeins of the yarn problem. It's so simple after it's all figured out. The original ball of yarn seems to be 2¼ times larger than when it was reduced to 3 inches, or the diameter cubed of the original ball is 243 over 4. Help!

George Givot Achieves Stardom

By AIRCASTER

George Givot (as I predicted) is to get radio stardom. . . . He has signed with J. P. Medbury's cigaret sponsor, and will be chief comedian for the seven remaining broadcasts, sharing the spot with Magnolia, for whom I also predicted a brilliant future when discussing new prospects last week.

A very serious problem (for sponsors of radio programs) has developed in Canada, and may force into existence a new policy of radio advertising. The Canadian Radio Commission has placed a drastic limit on commercial announcements, limiting them to 5 per cent of the time allotted to a commercial program. The rule goes into effect April 1. One of two things remain for the American sponsors serving those stations.

Either the Canadian outlets must be cut off, or the advertising announcements minimized to conform to the Canadian law.

Mary Garden, who has some little experience with radio, thinks it has its drawbacks. If you talk about voices and the radio in her presence, she will tell you promptly that it is her belief that radio never will discover a truly great voice, in the operatic sense.

Broadcasting, she says, has produced, and will continue to develop excellent voices, but the owners mostly lack dramatic personalities and probably would be failures if transferred to the operatic stage.

COUNTY MOVES TO RECOVER OVERCHARGE

The R. H. Cunningham & Sons Co., contractors in the construction of the Moss Side boulevard, were overpaid more than $55,000 for materials not delivered or authorized and for work not done, according to the final report of Main & Co., auditors.

The County Controller and Solicitor today were to be notified to charge the amount against the company.

The company also holds contracts for construction of the south approach to the West End-North Side Bridge and for the Clever road in Robinson Township, on which jobs the county is withholding payments. The amount retained will cover the overpayment, the auditors reported.

Chairman C. C. McGovern said any money due the company over the amount in question should be paid immediately, as he did not wish to force any contractor into bankruptcy.

The West End-North Side Bridge contract held by the Cunningham Company amounted to $731,588, on which only two current payments have been made. The county engineers have not given final approval to the approach, but have reported defects discovered and further difficulty over payment for this job is anticipated.

The auditors itemized nine overcharges for excavation, cement used and work said to have been done without authority. One charge of $1,079.17, the auditors said, was "paid to the contractor on account of sundry items of bridge paving as a subterfuge or device to pay for repair work to the boulevard and bridge rendered necessary by previous defective work, although the county was under no obligation to pay for the repair work.

HOLIDAY EASED TO AID NEEDY, PAY WAGES

Pittsburgh life insurance companies are observing the holiday on borrowing against policies declared on March 10 by State Insurance Commissioner Charles F. Armstrong.

An exception to this ruling which is being generally followed is to allow the lending of $100 on policies held by an individual in cases of extreme need. Pittsburgh companies are interpreting this provision as liberally as possible, insurance officials say.

HOLIDAY ACCEPTED

The lending holiday has been received quietly by policyholders. Much the same spirit as was found in the banking moratorium has prevailed, officials declare.

Action by George S. Van Schaick, New York superintendent of insurance, forbidding the declaration of dividends to insurance company stockholders or policyholders does not apply to Pennsylvania companies, Armstrong has announced.

The New York dividend ban thus has little effect here, and that only on companies incorporated in the state of New York. Among the latter companies in business in Pittsburgh, virtually all have dividends declared for almost a year in advance.

MODIFICATIONS TOLD

Commissioner Armstrong has announced three modifications of the loan holiday. They are:

Loans allowed to the full cash value of the policy to enable policyholders to continue to meet payrolls.

Loans applied for prior to the declaration of the holiday, March 10, may be allowed if it is shown that hardship would result through continued refusal.

If other states issue emergency rules in conflict with the Pennsylvania holiday terms, the companies may conform to the rulings of other states.

Because many of the companies in Pittsburgh are bound by regulations in states where they are chartered, there is some doubt on how far the modifications will be followed here.

Actress Tragedy On 5 Stations

"The Call of the Seine," a thrilling dramatization of an article published in tomorrow's issue of the American Weekly, feature magazine distributed each Sunday with the Sun-Telegraph, is presented in the Pittsburgh area tonight on the following schedule:

WCAE, 7 p. m.; KQV, 9:15 p. m.; WWSW, 8 p. m.; WWVA, Wheeling, W. Va., 5:30 p. m., and WMMN, Fairmont, W. Va., 6 p. m.

The drama, which concerns the fate of a French actress who became despondent over her tragic stage role, is one of the series being offered throughout the country over more than 100 stations by 17 Hearst newspapers, including the Sun-Telegraph. Suzanne Caubaye and Janet Martine play the leads.

COX SECRETARY STARTS TRIP

Miss Rosalyn Miller, one of the volunteer secretaries for Father Cox and his unemployment relief activities, is sailing this afternoon on the "Belgenland,, from New York for Havre, France. From Havre, Miss Miller goes immediately to Rome and Vatican City as a special messenger, carrying 4,000 commemorative cachets for mailing to this country from the Papal Postoffice on Sunday, April 2.

This date marks the opening of the Holy Year recently decreed by Pope Pius XI, for which Father Cox sponsored the cachet. This cachet idea is more familiar to stamp collectors than others. It is an appropriate commemorative design printed on an envelope. These envelopes have been addressed in Pittsburgh, taken to Rome by Miss Miller, who through the aid of Mons. Enrico Pucci—domestic prelate to the Pope, will have them mailed from the Vatican City Postoffic on the opening day of the "Extraordinary Jubilee." Each person receiving one of these cachet envelopes has donated 25 cents for the Old St. Patrick's breadline fund.

Scores of friends of Miss Miller were at the Pennsylvania Station last night to see her off. Incidentally she will be in Rome five days preceding the date of mailing the cachets. She will remain there until June to close arrangements for the Father Cox Pilgrimage to Rome and Lourdes. The cachet was made a success through the co-operation of the Sun-Telegraph.

The Father Cox-Sun-Telegraph subscription drive is swinging along with splendid results. For every subscription that comes in on the blank on this page or is telephoned in with the request that Father Cox be given credit for it brings to his unemployment relief fund a liberal cash commission. The Sun-Telegraph will give him another good sized check today.

Evangelist to Talk In Sheraden Tonight

Evangelistic meetings will be held in the Alliance Gospel Tabernacle, Sherwood avenue and Bergman streets, Sheraden, tonight and tomorrow under the direction of Evangelist David C. Wilcox, of Milwaukee, Wis. He will conduct a baptismal service in the First Christian Church, 658 Sherwood avenue, tonight.

At 10:45 a. m., tomorrow, he will speak on "The Fourfold Gospel," and at 2:45 p. m., on "Has Anti-Christ Appeared?" Tomorrow evening he will give his life story.

Special Services At Salvation Army

The Salvation Army will hold special services at 11 a. m. and 8 p. m. tomorrow, preceded by open-air meetings at Diamond and Smithfield streets. The morning services will be under the direction of Maj. John Spohn, and the evening services will be directed by Mrs. John Spohn.

3.05 Pct. Wine's Too Mild To Be Called Mocker

—By ARTHUR 'BUGS' BAER—

The California grape growers and the U. S. Senate can't seem to get together on the idea of wine.

The Senate says 3.05 is wine. But that ain't the stuff that is a mocker.

We're neither a Senator nor a Californian, but we know that 3.05 is not a glorious western sunset. It ain't even a warm spring breeze.

They can't pour that new wine into us old skins. Our only hope is that the Senate has taken up the children's problems first and will get to us old-timers later.

STUDENTS VIEW FASHION SHOW

What the well-dressed man will wear for spring was shown yesterday at the University of Pittsburgh in the season's first all-male style show, held at the Pitt Activities Building and attended by 200 students.

Fourteen Pitt youths modeled the latest in suits, ties, topcoats and hats. Alex Reich, of the Fintex Corporation, who explained the new styles, told the audience:

Styles included a gray and brown ensemble, the Cambridge gray suit, a poudre blue suit with notch lapels, and the English drape with pleated trousers.

Suits and topcoats worn by the mannequins were furnished by Fintex, men's clothiers; shoes by Regals and the other haberdashery by Heaths.

Patricia Pitt's Sprightly Comment on Pittsburgh Society Happenings

In Mayfair -With-

Patricia Pitt

This week-end is going to be more interesting to folks who like to go places than most of the week-ends in Lent, There'll be the dinner-dances celebrating St, Patrick's Day tonight at many of the country clubs and the hockey game to be played at Duquesne Gardens tonight for the benefit of the Junior League Skimmed Milk stations.

A group of Junior League girls will usher at the game tonight under the chairmanship of Betty McKay. They are Rita Borntraeger, Harriet Fickes, Mrs. Leonard S. Mudge, Mrs. Willis McCook Reed, Marie Louise Bickford, Lydia Irish, Katharine Frazer, Dorothy Jarvis, Mary Childs, Mrs. James McKay and Mrs. James Chambers McKay (Frances Reed), Mrs. John E. McKelvy, Martie Trimble, Anne Rose, Mary Elizabeth Floyd and Lucile Todd.

Then tomorrow has two most interesting events for the art-minded.

William R. Shugold, the distinguished Pittsburgh artist, will have an exhibit tomorrow afternoon, beginning at 2 o'clock, in his studio in the Bellefield Dwellings. He will show a number of water colors and small landscapes in oils.

Mr. Shulgold is the artist who some time ago did a series of portrait drawings for the Sun-Telegraph, called socialites.

Socialite Artist

The subjects of these drawings and many others interested in art have been invited.

Tomorrow evening will bring a concert by Pittsburgh's own symphony in Syria Mosque.

MRS CHARLES M. BREGG

The usual full calendar faces the College Club next week, with a new activity on the slate for Tuesday. That's the first open forum luncheon and at it Miss Hannah Patterson, chairman of the Allegheny County Committee on School Legislation, will be the speaker.

This new venture has been undertaken by the board of directors in response to many requests for discussions by authorities on controversial subjects. Luncheon reservations are asked at the club office.

Tomorrow the play-off in the bridge tournament, Tuesday, the professional women's dinner with Attorney Ella Braubarth speaking; Wednesday, the usual Red Cross sewing—in the old building—and then Thursday brings the customary tea and the weekly dinner.

A luncheon for charter members, many of whom are still active, will precede the usual Friday afternoon program, which is to be a musicale this week. Roy A. Shumaker, of the violin department, Pittsburgh Musical Institute, will give the program, Mrs. Shumaker accompanying. Mrs. Robert A. Monroe heads the tea hostesses that afternoon.

Another of those very popular dinner bridges is scheduled for Saturday with Mrs. Kirkland W. Todd heading the committee in charge.

Jewish Women to Hold Publicity Conference

A publicity conference will be held Monday afternoon by the Pittsburgh Conference of Jewish Women's Organizations. Presidents and publicity chairmen of the affiliated organizations will attend the meeting, which is to be held in the Y. M. and W. H. A. Club editors of the newspapers will conduct a forum.

* * *

The monthly business meeting of Court Allegheny, Catholic Daughters of America, is called for Tuesday evening in the Knights of Columbus Hall. Members of the court will attend the 8:30 mass in St. Peter's Church, North Side, Sunday morning. Plans are under way for a spring initiation to be held in the Elks Temple, Cedar avenue, on May 7.

* * *

Turner Parent-Teacher Association will have as speaker Edward F. Ege, of Wilkinsburg High School, on Tuesday evening. His subject will be "Vocations." Mrs. Wallace Bishop, with Mrs. P. C. Weinkauf as accompanist, and the Junior Choir of Advent Lutheran Church, will give the musical part of the program.

Election of officers will take place, these having been nominated: President, Mrs. P. S. Robertson; vice president, Mrs. A. A. Smith; secrtary, Mrs. J. D. Hiles; treasurer, W. A. Crede.

* * *

Chi Chi Chapter of Alpha Chi Omega announces postponement of the meeting on Monday. In place of the dinner which was scheduled the chapter and alumnae of the fraternity will hold a luncheon on Saturday, March 25, at 1 o'clock at the Congress of Women's Clubs.

Mrs. Peyton Wemyss-Smith of the National Council will be the guest of honor. While in Pittsburgh she will be entertained at the home of Mrs. A. Camp Streamer, Newport road. After leaving Pittsburgh she will visit Delta Chapter at Allegheny College, Meadville, prior to returning to her home in Oklahoma City.

* * *

A St. Patrick's Day card party is being held today by the Pittsburgh Girls' Club in the Fort Pitt Hotel.

At the annual election of the club these were chosen: Miss Nan C. Fagan, president; Miss Stella Maloney, vice president; Miss Lou B. Straub, recording secretary; Miss M. Betty Gardner, treasurer; Miss Blanche Olliffe, corresponding secretary; Miss Sara McKenzie, chairman vacation camp committee; Miss Dorothy Olliffee, publicity secretary; Miss Gertrude Kelly, house chairman.

* * *

The annual benefit bridge given by St. Xavier's Alumnae Association is to be held the Saturday following Easter, April 22, in St. Joseph's Hall, Fifth avenue.

Mrs. A. A. Frauenheim, chairman of the patroness committee, is being assisted by the officers and Mrs. Frank J. Lanahan, Mrs. J. M. O'Donnell, Mrs. L. C. Feeney, Mrs. C. A. Porth, and Miss Katherine Ryan.

Miss Rose Weiss to Wed Benjamin Horne Tomorrow

Miss Rose Weiss, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Max Weiss, of Clarissa street, Schenley Heights, has chosen tomorrow as the day for her marriage to Benjamin Horne, son of Mr. and Mrs. Isadore Horne, of Sharpsburg.

The bride will be unattended. After the ceremony, which will take place in the home of Rabbi A. A. Ashinsky, there will be a reception and wedding dinner for 50 guests in the Weiss home. Mr. Horne and his bride will be at home in Pittsburgh.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. Herman W. Bernard, formerly of Squirrel Hill, who have been traveling abroad for the past three years, will return to the states next week. After a short visit with their son in New York, they will return to Pittsburgh, and be at home with Dr. and Mrs. Samuel F. Round, of Edgewood Acres.

Daughters of Pioneers To Hear Three Papers

Mrs. S. H. Augustine, of North Dithridge street, is hostess today to the Keystone Chapter, Daughters of American Pioneers. The papers, which are on "Interesting Facts in the Life of William Penn;" "Benjamin Franklin as Ambassador to France" and "Historical Shrines in Pennsylvania," are being given by Miss Edna Eba, Miss Marguerite Elder and Mrs. W. T. Larimer.

Wilkinsburg P.T.A. Units Elect New Officers

Mrs. C. I. Beplar has been re-elected president of Kelly Unit, Wilkinsburg Parent-Teacher Association. Mrs. F. W. Bilhimer is now vice president; Mrs. H. F. Ramsey, secretary, and Ira D. Hogg is the re-elected treasurer.

Mrs. William Johns has been made president of the Johnston Unit. Other officers newly elected are Dr. Walter H. Singley, vice president; Mrs. Harry E. Gray, secretary and Mrs. James Cummings, treasurer.

THE FIRST SPRING HATS ARE MODELED IN SMART FABRICS

By KAY JOHNSON

IF YOU would usher in the spring with a burst of smartness be sure that your hat is of fabric, and preferably of the same fabric as your costume, whether dress, suit or coat. The new materials are versatile and lend themselves beautifully to the brims, berets and small hats of the new season, three of which are shown above.

* * *

exaggerated line from back to front. The brim turns up stiffly in back, and the hat sits firmly on the head, slightly down in back and in a straight line across the front. The only trimming is the little self bow in front telescope crown sailor—another of the hats which must be worn in a straight line across the forehead. The gentle dip of the brim over the eyes breaks the severity of the line. This is of a tweedy fabric in brown and beige diagonal stripes, with a band of two red leather braided

Life Story of Andrew Carnegie

By BURTON J. HENDRICK

Remotest Places Have Carnegie Libraries

FROM THE LIFE OF ANDREW CARNEGIE
By BURTON J. HENDRICK
Abridged for exclusive publication in the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph by special permission of Mrs. Andrew Carnegie

In his early library gifts Carnegie insisted that, in some conspicuous place, there be erected a simulacrum of an open volume, across whose pages were to be inscribed the words: "Let There Be Light," the rays of the rising sun illuminating the background. The concentration of light upon the dark universe of the average mind—such was the purpose guiding the library expenditures. Carnegie had strong faith in the eventual triumph of intelligence, but had outgrown belief in sudden methods.

Higher education, necessarily limited to a selected class, Carnegie did not despise; several of his finest benefactions took this form; but the thing that enlisted his interest was the progress of the "common mind," the gradual leveling up of mass intelligence.

A splendid monument like the Pittsburgh Institute afforded great satisfaction, but similarly in keeping with his program was a tiny granite library on the Island of Iona, off the coast of Scotland, or a little repository of books on the western prairie or the South African veldt.

Remembers Anderson

Always his memory, in planning library gifts; reverted to early days in Pittsburgh, when Col. Anderson placed his books at the disposal of himself and his working boy associates. The respect which Carnegie had for this mentor is manifest in the statue he erected in his honor, before the entrance to the Carnegie Library in Allegheny, and the work which Col. Anderson did in his restricted area was the task to which Carnegie, set himself on a continental scale. The creation of intellectual centers accessible at all times to all classes was the ideal.

Carnegie's first offer to Pittsburgh was ignored, the local newspapers denouncing it as a scheme to immortalize the benefactory. Even now the belief too widely prevails that every Carnegie library bears the giver's name and that, unless this form of recognition were forthcoming, no grant was to be obtained.

Never, directly or indirectly, did the donor propose such a distinction. Many communities—about one-third—have made acknowledgement in this form, but in all cases the gesture was a voluntary one. Carnegie was human, and perhaps, in the early days, when benefactions of this kind were unusual, such manifestations were not ungrateful, but it was a kind of glory that endless repetition rendered stale. The appellation that pleased him most was the simple phrase, inscribed over the doorway, "Free Public Library," prefixed by the name of the town—for these words expressed, more eloquently than any personal description, the end the building was to serve.

Though generally he acceded to a request that his name be used, there were occasions when a veto was imposed. Shelby M. Cullom tells how Carnegie contributed a large sum toward constructing the "Lincoln Library" in Springfield, Illinois. In gratitude the people proposed to name the building the "Lincoln-Carnegie Memorial Library," but Carnegie sharply protested, saying that he "would consider it a desecration to have any name linked with that of Lincoln."

When several hundred thousand dollars were contributed to the Franklin Institute of Boston, a similar proposal was made to hyphenate his name with that of the immortal statesman, only to be met with an indignant refusal.

The charge that Carnegie insisted on having his name attached to his every gift, and never gave "by stealth," is ridiculous to one who has examined his private papers and observed the stream of millions flowing from his coffers for an infinity of men and causes of which the public has never heard.

Carnegie Hall

The use of Carnegie's name was sometimes amusingly accidental. In 1892 he built a beautiful auditorium on Fifty-seventh street, calling it the "New York Music Hall." It was found impossible to book distinguished foreign artists for a place with such a title, "music hall" in England and the continent representing about the same thing as "variety house" in this country. Without Carnegie's knowledge and when he was absent in Scotland, the structure was transformed into "Carnegie Hall," under which denomination the greatest composers and performers for 40 years have gladly made the place the musical center of the metropolis.

The Pittsburgh Library developed into the great Carnegie Institute, with art galleries, museums, technical schools and an endowment of $36,000,000. An intimation was then put forth that the Institute provide the annual expenses of the library, thus relieving the taxpayers of their obligation. It was even hinted that Carnegie add to the endowment for that purpose! But this approach met with short shrift at his hands.

Rather than advance four million dollars to relieve the city treasury of its burden, he wrote W. N. Frew, president of the Institute, "I would much rather throw the money into the sea. The public libraries are the property of the city of Pittsburgh and subject to the control of the city as far as expenditures on them are concerned. I have quite enough to do with other departments, as you well know. I believe now since this is all thoroughly understood there will be no further trouble between the library trustees appointed by me and those representing the city. What the former should recognize is that the city holds the purse strings. The more they can get the city to contribute for library purposes, I believe, the better for the city, but that is a matter for the Mayor and the Council to decide."

From such a position Carnegie never budged. Library support was a public duty; his job was to act as an incentive to its fulfillment.

Letters asking for buildings Carnegie would read, perhaps submit to friends who might understand their merits, and, if action seemed warranted, a memorandum would be pencilled on the back authorizing his treasurer, Mr. Robert A. Franks, to honor the requisition. No real investigation took place; Carnegie was considerably affected by sentiment, showing a disposition to act favorably upon appeals from Pennsylvania towns, or parts of Scotland that moved his romantic side.

2,811 Libraries

For 15 years Carnegie conducted his library campaign, in 1911 the Carnegie Corporation, to which the bulk of his fortune had been transferred, taking the burden off his hands. The latest statistical survey, made in 1919, catalogued 2,811 "Carnegie Libraries," representing an expenditure of over $60,000,000. Of these, 1,946 were built in the United States, at a cost of practically $45,000,000. The rest were given to Canada, the British Isles and other English-speaking countries.

It may fairly be said that the sun never sets on Carnegie libraries; a map of the United States, dotted with these institutions, alone gives a graphic comprehension of their extent; certain commonwealths, such as New York and the Northwest, become almost an uninterrupted mass of black. They are found in the remotest sections of England, Scotland and Ireland; they rise in the clearings of New Zealand and Tasmania, and bring solace to marooned English-speaking men and women in the Fiji Islands and Mauritius.

It has been estimated that libraries erected by Andrew Carnegie provide reading matter daily for 35,000,000 Americans. Buildings not a product of his bounty perform the same service for 24,000,000. Many in the second category are indirectly Carnegie's creation, for they were built by independent communities at their own expense in response to a public demand which, in itself, was inspired by Carnegie's example.

These figures must comprise the greater part of the country's English-reading population. The task of bringing books to every man, woman and child has apparently been fulfilled. This was accomplished without coddling, for the larger part of the expenditure, as already explained, the taxpayers have assumed. By his unique and deliberately planned system of "bribery," Carnegie made the public library a fixed part of the American educational system. For it is not extravagant, in view of the facts, to insist that its universality in the United States, and in all countries that speak the English language, is his work.

Whether this should be regarded as a great achievement depends upon the view one holds concerning the value of the free public library as an agency of progress, but on this point, once vigorously discussed, there is no longer much difference of opinion. No community now opposes education at public expense, and in the last 25 years the library has obtained similar recognition. If all the Carnegie buildings in the United States were suddenly to be wiped out by fire, there is little doubt that they would be rebuilt at the cost of the taxpayers.

Work for Science

Carnegie's work for science was limited to his native country; already an American foundation of the same kind, but on a greater scale, was under consideration. Mr. Balfour's opinion, "It is to science that we have to turn for the future progress of the race," constantly occupied his thoughts. The dawn of the new century was a propitious time. That the preceding hundred years had unfolded more of nature's secrets than the preceding 5,000 was a theme on everybody's lips, and the possibilities lying before the approaching era seemed boundless. Anyone [illegible] really aspired to help the [illegible] family could hardly find [illegible] more fruitful field, and [illegible] Carnegie's plans would take definite shape in this form might therefore be assumed. The outcome was the "Carnegie Institution in Washington," an enterprise which is best appraised in the words of Sir Robert Ball, Lowndean Professor of Astronomy at Cambridge. "In the history of the world there has never before been so efficient a force for the advancement of knowledge."

The original endowment was $10,000,000; this has been increased by subsequent gifts, from Carnegie himself and from the Carnegie Corporation, and the total resources now amount to $30,000,000. Dr. Gilman served as president for two years, being succeeded, in 1904, by Robert S. Woodward, who presided over the Carnegie Institution until 1920, when Dr. John C. Merriman became the third president.

Great Discoveries

The accumulation of wealth takes on a new dignity when one recalls that Carnegie's steel bonds, in the hands of his Washington trustees, have brought a vast array of hitherto unknown universes to human knowledge—some of them perhaps larger than the Galaxy of which the Solar System and the Milky Way are a part—and pushed out the circumference of space not far from 300,000,000 light years. In thoughts such as these the early struggles of the Edgar Thomson Company assume a cosmic importance of which the pioneers never dreamed.

Explorations into the side-real heavens form a department by themselves; the tiny speck of planetary dust known as the earth has been the subject of researches that already fill several hundred printed volumes. And, as this terrestial globe is placed under the Carnegie microscope, it does not seem such a contemptible atom after all; every square inch teems with exciting interest. Its land, water and air; its mountains, rivers, valleys, volcanies, rocks and oceans; its animal life, present and remote; its mysterious magnetic currents and radiations; the fossils that unfold the annals of a prehistoric past, and the archeological remains setting forth a forgotten human record—in making so extensive a field its own, the Carnegie Institution has indeed taken all knowledge for its province.

Nor does it selfishly keep these explorations to itself. Though not educational in a teaching sense, it does disseminate a vast amount of scientific information. Bulky volumes and monographs issue in an unfailing stream for the benefit of the learned world; and the popular mind, demanding its science in more understandable form, is enlightened by lectures, radio talks, exhibitions and motion pictures.

Puzzled Girl Seeks Opinions On Public Dances

Or are they dreadful places, where "no nice girl ever goes?"

Flory is asking us. She's lonesome. She likes light and music and fun—but she works and lives in a little band-box apartment. She doesn't know anyone who would take her to swanky private parties; so she and her chum have been going to the dance hall down the street.

And the other day the office force found it out, and told her that Nice Girls didn't go to such places.

Is that true? Or isn't it? And if it is, where's a lonely kid to find a little fun?

Dear Elsie:

Do you think it is terrible to go to a public dance?

Before this I didn't think so, and my chum and I have been going to them. We both like to dance, and we don't know anyone who gives private dances.

We get awfully tired of just going out to eat, or going to a show. We don't know a great many boys, and we hate to sit home in our little apartment evening after evening. We like to read, and do quite a bit of it, too; but we also like to go out where there are people to talk to, and music.

So, some time ago, we decided we would try going to the small public dance hall, which is not far from where we live. Once or twice we went to a bigger one, down town. We had a good time, and every one has been nice to us. We went by ourselves and came home by ourselves until just lately.

But naturally, we see the same boys there a good deal, and after you dance with a boy a good many times you feel that you get to know him. One night two of the boys walked home with us. They seem nice, and have always been gentlemen, and they took us to a show one night. It all seemed all right to us.

ADVISED TO STOP

But the other day I innocently mentioned going to this dance hall, to a girl at the office, and the look she gave me! She said that nice girls never went to such places, and that unless I wanted people talking about me, or get in with altogether the wrong kind of people, I'd better cut it out.

Do you think that is true? The place seemed decent enough to us. Of course, there were some people there that we didn't care for, but we just didn't pay any attention to them; and if some boy we didn't care for tried to make up to us, we didn't let him.

Even at the big hall down town, nothing rough seemed to be going on; and of course we wouldn't go out with any of the people we met there, not, at least, until we knew them well enough to get a line on them. We're not taking up with any slickers with big cars, or anything like that, even if some should happen along.

WANTS OPINIONS

But I am worried about going, if what this girl says is true, about people thinking you're tough if you do. Do you think Dot, my chum, and I, will be getting in wrong if we don't stop? And if we do stop, where are we going to find any company or fun?

I'd like to hear from some other girls and boys about this. Some who go, as well as the others. I'd like to know what they think, and what folks think about them, and us.

FLORY.

Well, how about it, youngsters?

Are, or aren't Public Dances a necessary and perfectly respectable part of our modern life?

Do you think Dot and Flory will get in wrong, and be passed up by Nice People, if they go to them?

Or do Nice People go to them sometimes, when they're hungry for fun—and can they stay nice if they do?

Come on! Let's have your verdict!

THE RUNNERS -:- -:- -:- -:-

Drawn by Nell Brinkley

When the race is all over, the cheers rising high against the flame on the column, that licks the blue sky, and the sleek young modern Atalanta has made her record and won first place, caught her breath, faced the camera, the News Reel, the microphone, and shaken hands with her friends—she pats her firm young chest, and feels herelf the "Champ."

But there's one more contest, one more race to run—and she will never win it—hasn't a chance. When Cupid comes along, throws down his quiver, smooths back his hair, and says "come on, let's race" the pretty young Amazon who has downed the world in her particular line will take the challenge—and lose! Mighty independent, smooth-muscled, fancy-free, she looks out at you from the news pages, smiling, fairly crisp with health. A CHAMPION! What is love to her but just a story to read and forget? The thing is—she put her feet down right—and the world says she ran like the flowing wind or a machine of light—PERFECT!

But along will come some nice young man—soon or late—and his story will seem very real and important—and the Champion will come in second to Cupid, marry, and have a baby. And what will a race, and cheers be then but a nice memory?

NELL BRINKLEY.

Correct Manners

By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman

Open the Gift

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1—When a person receives a gift package from a friend and they stay but a few mintues, should this package be opened while the person is still there, or wait until that person leaves?

2—What would be the proper thing to say, as the gift would probably carry a card from "The Twins," when I know it would be from the family?

H.

1—The package should be opened just when the person hands it to you. You see, if you don't open it then, it looks as if you aren't very enthusiastic about receiving it. This makes the giver embarrassed and "wondering." Whereas if you, with complete naturalness, open the package when it is given to you, and say pleasant and appreciative things about the gift, it is just what is expected.

2—You should thank anyone and everyone who you think has had anything to do with the giving of the gift.

Announcement of Birth

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I have been enjoying your department in the paper and now have a question which I would like to have you answer.

What is the proper procedure for announcing the birth of a child to relatives and interested friends? The simple announcements in the birth column of the paper would not reach many of my friends abroad, and I would like to mail some sort of personal announcement. Must this be a note, or can it be an attractive card with blank spaces to be filled in with name, date, weight, and so forth? The engraved announcements are much too expensive for me, and I am hesitating between personal notes, and the cards that are sometimes used.

K.

Next to the engraved birth announcements, which are in the best form, the very simple birth announcement cards are the best of the ready-made announcement type. I always hesitate to recommend these, for usually they are so over-done that they show no taste or discrimination. But if you can find a simple one, white all-white, this would be very good to send to those friends who would not be apt to see the birth announcement in the newspapers. Get one with spaces for only the name and the date. It is not considered good taste, because it isn't necessary, to include any other information. Omit the items for weight, place of birth, and so forth. In other words, include only the information that is on the engraved card, which is the name of the baby and the date of its birth.

And I would like it even more if you would write notes to your friends abroad . . . this is even nicer than sending cards, and they would like it so much better than a card announcement.

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

Make Use of Disease Preventives

Tremendous strides have been made in the treatment and relief of scarlet fever. But the number of sufferers from this dangerous disease continues to grow. I am sorry to say this increase is due to negligence and the lack of proper care of those children who have the disease.

Dr. Copeland

Scarlet fever is dangerous because of its serious complications. The kidney is often involved in this disease. Pneumonia may follow. Infections of the middle ear produce other dreaded complications.

These complications can be prevented when scarlet fever serum is given to the sufferer. The serum is injected into the vein or muscle of the patient. It lessens the severity of the disease and in most instances prevents serious complications.

Within recent years a scarlet fever vaccine has been used as a preventive of scarlet fever. Though this vaccine is not entirely successful in all cases, its advocates regard it as of great value in the majority of instances. The vaccine is given to children who show a sensitivity to this disease. This is determined by the "Dick test." It closely resembles the "Shick test," which is used to determine a child's susceptibility to diphtheria.

Unfortunately, there are many persons who object to vaccination, serium injections and similar measures used to protect against disease. I cannot say too much as to the importance of vaccination and injections as a protection against smallpox and diphtheria and scarlet fever, as well.

Another grave source of danger of scarlet fever is the common negligence and carelessness in the care of children suffering from this disease. Too often home remedies are relied upon in the treatment of scarlet fever. In many cases the physician is called only after the damage has been done.

In addition to careful medical supervision, the child should be isolated from other children. The room should be quarantined from four to six weeks.

If you live in a community where diphtheria and scarlet fever are prevalent, take the necessary measures for protection against these diseases. Consult with your doctor or the local health officials.

Answers to Health Queries

H. S. Q.—I had a small mole on my chin and I used a strong acid to remove it. The mole came off but it left a round red mark. What could I use to heal it up?

A.—This will probably bleach out in time. Such chemical preparations as you describe should be applied by a skin specialist.

* * *

W. B. M. Q.—Is there a cure for cataracts on the eyes? I believe that this condition was caused by diabetes. It has persisted for some time, but lately has grown worse. What would you advise?

Son's Black Eye

By CONSTANCE CAMERON

Son sneaked into the kitchen just before dinner, looking slightly the worse for wear. Mother stood aghast as she surveyed the blue spot that was rapidly swelling into a big "shiner." Her boy had been fighting! Horror of horrors! Where did it happen and why, and who was the other participant in the melee? Son hadn't much information to offer—or that he chose to offer. He was sent to the bathroom to partially repair the damage.

After dinner Dad called the boy into the library and in a casual man-to-man fashion said: "How does the other fellow look?" Son grinned. "Worse'n I do," he admitted modestly. Well, what was it all about? Dad leaned back, lighted a cigar and was regaled with a blow-by-blow account of the fracas.

Son's gang, it seemed, had built a dug-out clubhouse—cavelike affair in which they'd put a stove, and in which were held sacred and secret meetings. A new boy had moved into the neighborhood, recruited the left wing, as it were, and demolished the clubhouse—just on general principles. Son's gang rose up in righteous wrath and attacked the new boy and his rowdy recruits, and so far as could be judged by Son's account, they had been properly vanquished.

Dad nodded, and his eyes twinkled. "Think they'll stay licked?" "You bet they will!" promised the boy.

Then Dad suggested that they invite the bully to join the club, and Son silently considered this.

"Well, don't fight them again unless you have to," said Dad in conclusion, and Son looked up in amazement.

"You're not sore at me Dad?"

Dad's hand was on the boy's shoulder. "No," he said soberly. "Sometimes a fellow has to show the other guy who's boss. Don't do it unless it's necessary though."

"Mom wanted me to come home and tell her—" said Son, "but you know how the kids laugh if a fella always runs home to his mother—"

"Yes, I know," said Dad kindly. "Best to settle things yourself," and arm in arm they went down the hall.

"Women just don't understand," whispered Son confidentially.

"No, sometimes they don't," admitted Dad.

And I think Dad was right. For a "fella" has to learn to cope with opposition alone sometime and a good healthy fight when it is justified never hurt any boy.

Continuation of Love's Reawakening

By ADELE GARRISON

Samuel Brixton—Bound, Gagged, Injured—Is Found

"What's that?"

With a nervous expletive, "Hen-ner-y"—the only member of our group not disciplined to silence in emergencies, voiced his astonishment—and apprehension—at the deep groan which had come from the interior of the supposedly deserted hut.

There was no delay in Lee Chow's answer.

"It is either a trap, or some one in distress," he said. "In either case, we must find out what is inside there."

"Wait!" he added a fractional second later. Then he moved as noiselessly as an Indian to my side and bent his head to mine.

"You and Miss Mary must stay here in the shelter of the trees," he whispered. "If there is the sound of a shot, or if I call out, 'Down!' drop to the ground instantly. Your lives may depend upon your obedience. For your ease of mind, I will tell you that I do not believe there is danger for us, but he who is prepared is thrice armed. May I have your word not to come nearer until I summon you?"

"Of course," I said promptly, for I knew that women would only hinder the business of the next few minutes.

"And you, Miss Mary?" He turned his gaunt face toward Dicky's lovely young niece whose arm was linked in mine.

"Sure thing!" she assented carelessly, then as he turned away, she added a whispered word of derision. "Grouchy Grandpa! But I suppose he's right at that."

WYNNE APPROACHES HUT

I put up my hand, and touched her lips for silence. Because of the rushing brook, I knew that our whispered conversation could not be heard at the hut, but I wished to take no chance whatever of hindering the plan which Lee Chow and Wynne with heads together, were setting in motion.

We could not hear their words but when one of them—I guessed Wynne, though their figures were indistinct in the darkness, dropped to the ground, that he meant to crawl to the door of the hut, and from there put in motion whatever plan had been devised, I was sure, and although I could neither see nor hear his movements, I found myself mentally computing his rate of travel, and when my brain signaled an involuntary "now!" it was but the fraction of a second before we heard Wynne's voice in quick, raucous though low-toned command.

"Hands up in there! We've got you covered, and there are plenty of us to take care of you."

There was no answer, but after a second of silence there came again that anguished groan.

"No monkey-business!" Wynne warned. "We're ready to shoot first and ask questions afterward. Ready!"

At the word, evidently a signal to either Lee Chow or Hen-ner-y, a brilliant ray of light suddenly illuminated the interior of the shack so thoroughly that even Mary and I could see that no one was standing upright within it. There was a low-voiced exclamation from Wynne, and then, after the powerful flashlight had played upon every inch of the interior, I found Lee Chow again at my side.

BRIXTON FOUND

"There is only one person in the hut," he said, "and that a man, bound and partially gagged, and, I am afraid, grievously ill. Come. You may be able to help us."

He moved away, and I caught at Mary's arm in sudden panic.

"Oh! child!" I whispered. "Do you suppose? Could it be?—"

"It couldn't be Uncle Dicky," Mary said coolly, and I realized that her nerves were far steadier than mine, "because it isn't nearly time for him to appear. Besides, if it were anyone of our party, they'd know it, and say so." She nodded her head emphatically toward Lee Chow and Wynne.

But I had not thought that the man in the hut was one of the rescue party. Another fantastic conjecture was having its way with me, a conjecture that was incredibly realized when I had made my way into the hut and in the glare of the flashlight saw the unconscious figure of the man on the floor of the hut.

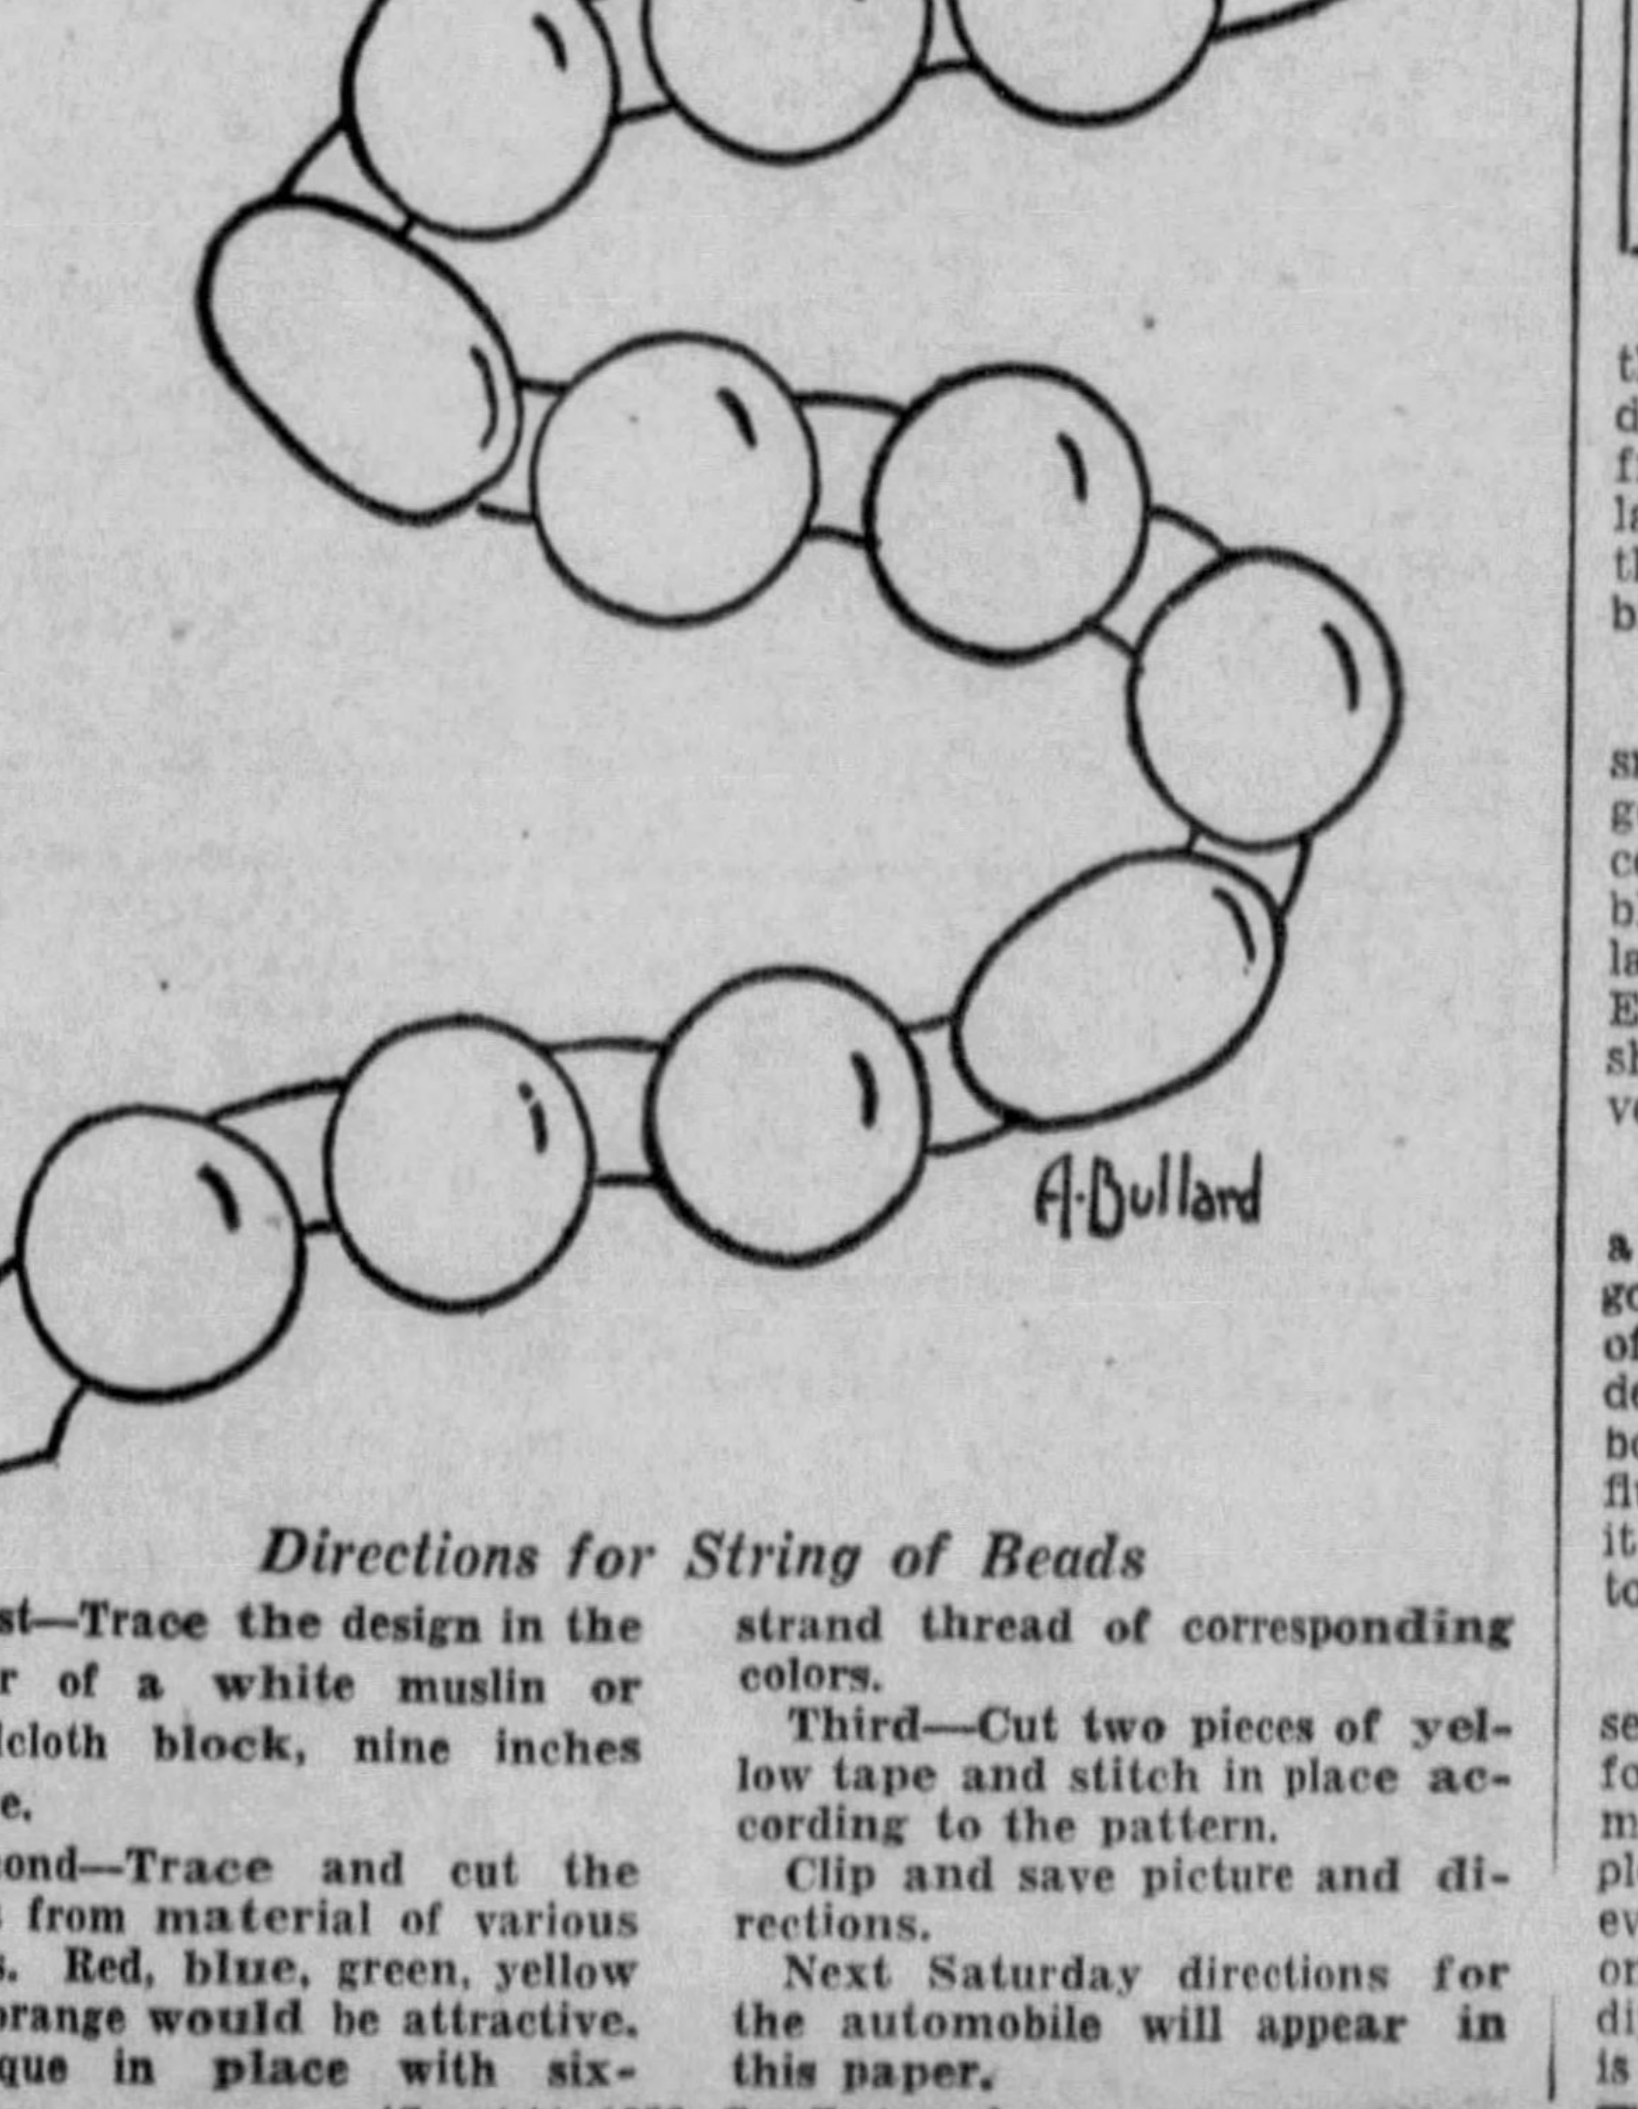
Toy Quilt -:- Made of Bias Tape and Applique



Directions for String of Beads

Second—Trace and cut the beads from material of various colors. Red, blue, green, yellow and orange would be attractive. Applique in place with six-strand thread of corresponding colors.

Third—Cut two pieces of yellow tape and stitch in place according to the pattern.

Fashion Flashes

By ALICE ALDEN

A gray evening is indicated by the interest in gray for after-dark wear. A charming evening frock is done in delicate gray lace and has gray fox swirls at the armhole. It has a belt of bright-red lacquered satin.

We still indorse checks as the smartest design for sports or general wear. A grand utility coat, ideal for traveling, is of blue black and white in a fairly large, bold check. It is made on English lines and so has raglan shoulders, patch pockets and a vent in back.

Over the shoulder, flung with a grand, but careless gesture, go many of the smartest capes of the season. A new model, in deep wine red velvet with a border of silver fox, is worn flung over one shoulder where it ripples in deep folds almost to the waist.

Just a dip over the eye is essential in a brimmed hat made for sports wear. A delightful model is in brown felt with a pleat to make a shallow crown, even shallower. The brim, short on one side, wide on the other, dips over one eye and the hat is trimmed with brown grosgrain.

Contract Bridge -:- HOW TO PLAY and HOW TO WIN

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

The Slam Gauntlet

Experience has demonstrated that a large majority of the makable Grand and Small Slams must go through the gauntlet of the forcing four and five notrump bids if the players are to be reasonably safe in the contracts they undertake. Certainly this is true of Grand Slams, for, while Small Slams are sometimes bid on distributional values and long suits, the possibility of losing to an adversely held Ace must be fully considered by those who would bid the Grand Slam.

An example of a splendidly bid Small Slam, which gave a top-score in a Duplicate game, in New York, recently, to Samuel Fry, Jr., and his partner, Nathan Spengold, is shown on the hand below:

North, Dealer.

North:
♠K Q 9 6
◇Q
♣A 9 6

West:
♠A 8 4 3
♡8 2
◇9 7 3 2
♣Q 7 3

East:
♠J 10 5 2
♡9 3
◇J 8 4
♣J 10 4 2

South:
♠7
♡10 7 5 4
◇A K 10 6 5
♣K 8 5

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ♡	Pass	3 ♡	Pass
3 ♠ (1)	Pass	4 ◇ (2)	Pass
4 N T (3)	Pass	6 ♡ (4)	Pass
Pass	Pass

1—A mild Slam try.

2—After this bid, South also shows interest in the Slam possibilities by disclosing his biddable diamond suit.

3—The Four-Five Notrump Convention, showing two Aces and the King of a bid suit.

4—South does not have two Aces, but whether North holds the club Ace or the spade Ace, the Slam appears assured. The direct Slam bid here denies the possession of two Aces.

In consequence of this accurate bidding, North and South were the only pair to reach the Small Slam. Actually it would appear that other players should also have done so. The honor-trick holding certainly places the hand in the Slam zone, and more favorable distribution could scarcely be expected.

Today's Question

South opens with a bid of one spade, North bids two clubs, South bids two diamonds. What should North now bid, holding the following hand (no intervening bid)?

♠4 ♡3 ◇A 10 4 3 ♣A Q 8 5 4 3 2

Answer—Four diamonds. The clubs should not be Rebid because of the danger of a pass, and a Raise to five diamonds should not be made because of the danger of an unsuccessful Slam contract.

The Beauty Box

By HELEN FOLLETT

Girls of high school age need nine hours of sleep, if eyes are to sparkle, complexion to retain the freshness of youth. It is during sleep that the body makes repairs, generates energy for the next day's activities. Late hours are beauty wreckers.

Observing finger nails, by and large, here and there where the dear ones gather, it is sad to relate that the brilliant red veneer is sometimes resorted to as a substitute for nail hygiene. If there's time to sweep on the carmine glimmer, there's also time to snip off shags of cuticle, pass the orange wood stick under the nail eave, shape the nails gracefully. After washing the hands, press back the cuticle at the nail bases with the towel. Every night get busy with the cuticle cream which will keep the flesh from hardening, breaking, producing hangnails.

After scouring the teeth, using plenty of elbow grease, digging bristles between the teeth, rinse the mouth with a refreshing lotion to remove foreign particles which the brush has dislodged. Salt water will serve; it is recommended for hardening the gums, keeping them in good condition. Or, apply the salt with a brush and rinse away with clear water.

It is not to the credit of the phrail sex, but the fact remains that not one woman among twenty is justified in going without some kind of a corselette or hip bandage. Frocks of this season's vintage demand rounded slenderness and the utmost perfection of posture and carriage about which the average woman thinks not at all, her mind being centered on weights and measurements, which are of less importance in the cultivation of beauty. So harness up, get set.

QUICK RELIEF FROM CONSTIPATION

That is the joyful cry of thousands since Dr. Edwards produced Olive Tablets, the substitute for calomel.

Dr. Edwards, a practicing physician for 20 years, and calomel's old-time enemy, discovered the formula for Olive Tablets while treating patients for chronic constipation and torpid livers.

No griping is the "keynote" of these little sugar-coated olive-colored tablets. They help cause the bowels and liver to act normally. They never force them to unnatural action.

If you have a "dark brown mouth"—bad breath—a dull, tired feeling—sick headache—torpid liver—consipation, you should find quick, sure and pleasant results from one or two of Dr. Edwards Olive Tablets.

Walter Winchell ON BROADWAY

The Love Letters of W. W.

Chief Magistrate James E. MacDonald, New York City: My Dear Sir: I often permit my column to be used by Mr. and Mrs. Anybody, who haven't influence or pull. To my desk comes this irritating story. The manager of a cleaning establishment asserts that an errand boy from his place picked up a scarf to be cleaned from a New York judge, who owed this cleaning firm $13 for a year. The scarf was lost, and the concern offered, to deduct $5 from hizzoner's long overdue bill to pay for the scarf—$5 being the value placed on the lost item by the judge himself.

The judge said no—that the cleaners would have to give him cash. He ordered the man taken before the Magistrate's Court, where the presiding judge's verdict was that the cleaner would have to pay $5 cash—within one week's time. Three weeks passed and the money wasn't paid.

The judge, who brought the charges, then had the cleaner arrested, and the victim was again taken before the Magistrate's Court—before the same pal of the complainant. The magistrate ordered the cleaner jailed, to await trial in Special Sessions, on $500 bail. Fortunately, the cleaner's boss was with him, and he put up the ransom. When it was explained to the Magistrate's Court about the $13 bill—the judge suggested that a suit be brought against the debtor in the regular civil court. In the meantime, the cleaner is stuck with the premium that must be paid on bail.

I omit all names for the present, sir, so that if the story related to me is exaggerated, nobody will be offended. Won't you please find time to look into this? And if it is all true—it will please many of us to know that you, as Chief Magistrate, will not countenance a judge who goes to such extremes over a mere $5.

President Franklin D. Roosevelt, White House, America—My dear Mr. President: The entire nation is vocalizing your praises, but you must know that by now, sir. Nevertheless I want to add a word of appreciation on behalf of the "bold, reprehensible, brave, indispensable, sensible lads of the press."

My journalistic chums at the Capitol tell me that there never was a man down there, whatever his position, who was so revered by the newshounds as you are. The New York boys knew what to expect, of course, but the lads from out of town, who had never met you, had no idea a Big Man could be so regular.

I understand that you paused in the busy ceremonies of the inauguration to reprimand a couple of officious guards, who tried to rough up a photographer, who was doing his duty. They tell me, too that you even informed the cops that if the hocus-focus boys' cameras were damaged—that the cops would have to pay the costs. Little things like that, sir, unheard of before in a man of your importance, endeared you to the lads of the lens and typewriter to such an extent—that you never can do wrong in their orbs. And they all are showing that—by giving you the best "press" a man ever had.

Hon. Alfred E. Smith, Empire State edifice, New York City: My dear Mr. Smith: First, thanks for your autographed likeness—which will be placed on my office walls between my bride's photo, and the picture of the pride of the tribe, Walda. I write now because it seems to me that with all the honky-dooly going on about the imminent reappearance of legal lager—the thirsty citizens have sort of neglected you—you who did more to show up the fallacies of prohibition statutes than any other dozen patriots.

I guess the country is just-jumping on the band-wagon you started rolling years ago, when most Congressmenaces and other privileged tax-dodgers thought that the "noble experiment" was a swelegant thing—for the other guy. Not so very long ago—yours was almost the only powerful voice which was ever raised to expose the futility of the law, and now that the thing that you worked for is coming to pass, most of the editors are forgetting to hurl their orchids at the right man.

I only hope, though, that the lords in Washington and in the various provinces have sense enough to heed your last little bit of sage counsel—not to pile a mess of overly heavy taxes on legalized suds. If they don't, they certainly will reduce the consumption of beer—boost the tariff on it, lower the quality and spoil the whole thing.

Mrs. Walter Winchell, Safe in the earthquake area: Dearest—Tell Bea I killed that story. Chiefly because I am opposed to the darn thing myself. More so, when I learned that two of our better-known statesmen were strictly being professional patriots. Meaning, my dear, that their racket is flag-waving.

One of these professional patriots is on his way back from England to face federal investigation for not filing an income tax return for 1931. The other guy, from the middle West, never paid a tax in his life. He buys nothing but municipal and other tax-exempt bonds. But he makes up laws called surtaxes and brackets that have made many a hard-worker pay back over half of what he makes to the government.

Earthquake On Screen

THE GLOBE TROTTER

People of that area of Southern California visited by the recent earthquake are shown cleaning up in the current issue of Hearst Metrotone News. In Long Beach, Huntington and Compton, steam shovels are shown knocking down tottering walls and scooping up the debris from the streets. The Globe Trotter gives a description of the progress of the work.

Congressman Cullen, of New York, who introduced the beer bill in the House, and for whom the bill is named, gives a vigorous talk on his measure in which he predicts that the revenue derived from the new taxes will go a long way toward balancing the budget.

First pictures of the fire that swept the German Reichstag in Berlin shows this beautiful building ruined almost beyond repair.

The mighty United States fleet on the Pacific Coast winds up its extensive war games with the greatest parade ever seen in those waters. More than 130 fighting vessels are in line.

Skiing in skirts is the latest fad of Bavarian jumpers.

The annual pre-Lenten carnival at Viareggio, Italy, is pictured. There are floats with dancing girls, and lively music fills the air.

The Coast Guard cutter Kickapoo jams her steel bow into the thick ice of the Penobscot River to make a lane for shipping to enter at Bangor, Maine.

Note—Because of the necessity upon theater managers to arrange their programs to time requirements, it is possible that some of the subjects in the above issue of Hearst Metrotone News may not be shown in your theater.

Miss Bennett Is Star In Stanley

By WILLIAM J. LEWIS

A pleasing comedy of the drawing room variety, "Our Betters," has Constance Bennett as its scintillating star in the Stanley. Based on a play of the same title by Somerset Maugham, it is a satire on the snobs of English society—that part of it that goes in for sophistication and a rather unwholesome mode of living. Miss Bennett does not have a particularly edifying role, but it permits her to be smart and clever and to wear swell gowns, and to be able to outwit her snooty friends when she finds herself in a jam. It shows her degenerating from a nice clean girl to a self-seeking climber, and she plays the part to the hilt, as the saying is.

She is an American girl who has married an English aristocrat for love, and when she finds her husband has married for her money, she changes her mode of living and becomes a gold-digger herself, and even goes to the extent of buying a title for her sister. Sis, however, brings her partially to her senses before she starts to go back home.

Besides the comedy of snappy dialogue there is comedy of characterization, every part in the picture being a portrait that will interest. Miss Bennett does hers as well as anything she has done for the screen. Violet Kemble-Cooper, English actress, also is excellent as catty sort of woman, hungry for love, but opposed to marriage because it is so commonplace. Gilbert Roland is the young man she keeps dangling—by presents principally.

Warner Star Lion Man

By MARY SHINE

Out-Tarzaning Tarzan is Buster Crabbe's role in "King of the Jungle," which began an engagement in the Warner yesterday. Left alone in the jungle as a tiny babe, he wanders into a den of baby lions and grows up with them, becoming their leader. Whattaman! How he does stalk around in a scrap of moth-eaten leopard skin uttering snarling, blood-curdling noises, with a wild gleam in his eyes.

Buster is captured with his lions and sold to a circus, as the main feature of the show. He escapes and terrorizes everyone in New York, and meets Frances Dee, who plays the piano for him, probably on the theory that "music hath charms to soothe the savage breast." Anyhow, it works. She teaches him English, and falls in love with him. His heart is still in Africa, however, and he longs to return there with his lions—and Frances.

Then one night there is a sudden fire on the circus lot, with the tents in flames, people screaming, animals stampeding, elephants loose in the streets, and in the midst, Buster with his ferocious animals around him. Then, back to Africa.

Clean-up Day Film Plan

By HARRISON CARROLL

HOLLYWOOD, March 18.—Unless he encounters censorial difficulties, Cecil B. De Mille is planning to make one of the year's most sensational films for Paramount.

He calls his story "Money," and he intends to show how the youth of the nation steps in and cleans up graft, financial crookedness, political chicanery and gangster slaughter.

For some time, De Mille has had Bartlett Cormack, author of "The Racket," preparing this original story for the screen. It starts out with boy's week, when the country's young men step briefly into the spots of authority. But instead of going through the motions, these youthful officials actually try to accomplish something. Meeting failure in this, they take other steps.

Calling for some forthright dealing with delicate subjects, the idea is sure to be received cautiously by Paramount. If they okay the story, however, De Mille will rush—if he can ever be said to rush—into production with the picture. Final decision awaits the return of Emanuel Cohen from New York.

Swedish Film Rich In Simple Charm

The Scandinavian colony of Pittsburgh turned out in full force last night to enjoy "Vaermlaenningarna," a Swedish film presented in the Connelley Trade School auditorium under the auspices of the Swedish Male Chorus, which sang magnificently as part of the program.

The picture, based on an old Swedish play, is not only a revelation of the scenic charm of the Vaermland countryside, but also a sympathetic presentation of the character and customs of those simple folk.

As for the plot of the play or operetta, it is very simple and very familiar. The rich man's son is to marry the other rich man's daughter, but he loves the beautiful though humble girl of the people.

Broadways Of the World — All in a Day

By Mark Hellinger

KING DAVID HOTEL, JERUSALEM, Palestine.—Your first impression of this city is one of cleanliness. I don't doubt that I'll see plenty of poverty, dirt and filth in the poorer sections of the town—but I suppose that applies to any city in the world. Sufficient to relate at the moment that the roads are well paved, most of the buildings seem to sparkle with newness and the general effect is decidedly good.

Inasmuch as I arrived this morning and was compelled to snatch a few hours' rest immediately after, I'm not in a position to rattle off too much about the town at the present time. So the best I can do is to offer you my first impressions, describe this most remarkable hotel, go into a few whys and wherefores, and let it go at that.

First, the hotel. Strange to report, it is the most expensive place I have struck on my entire tour thus far. By every process of reasoning, you'd think it would be one of the cheapest.

But, no. They ask far more for rooms here than the best hotel in Paris, and the price of a suite would stagger even a Harry Lauder.

I squawked to the assistant manager about the situation.

"Why the heavy tariff?" I wanted to know. "Don't you birds know that there's a depression on all over this world? Why, of all places, should this be the most expensive hotel in the world at the present time?"

"It's the water, sir," was the very calm reply. "Just the water."

The water! If he had told me that the terrific charge was due to the fact that Jack Pearl was a great radio success in the States or because Douglas Fairbanks wore a size seven hat, I couldn't have been more astonished.

"What the devil are you talking about?" I cried. "What has water got to do with the price of a room and bath in this hotel?"

"It has everything to do with it, sir," was the courteous response. "It's not the room that costs the money! it's the bath. You see, Mr. Hellinger, water is a great luxury in Jerusalem. We catch as much rain as we possibly can—when it rains. We keep our power as low as possible, but we must still maintain the necessary service. And we find ourselves buying water far too often.

"The cost of that water is so high it is almost unbelievable. Some of our guests, finding the luxury of a bath too good to be true, take as many as three and four dips a day.

"During a season when rain is very scarce, the guest who takes two baths a day actually costs us money. Since we cannot request our customers to stay out of the bathtubs as much as possible, we must rate our charges accordingly. If you find the hotel expensive, sir, please be assured that we are not to blame. It's the water."

Well, we live and learn . . .

A few first impressions of Jerusalem:

The local Y. M. C. A., situated directly across the street from the King David Hotel, is unquestionably the finest building of its kind in the world. It looks more like a palace than anything else, and it would be a showplace in any city in the universe.

Like so many other buildings and recent developments in Jerusalem, this Y. M. C. A. was built with American capital—the main part of which was contributed by a gentleman who wanted to prove that Jerusalem could go in for bigger and better things.

Late in the day I met a man who lives in this Y. M. C. A. I asked him how he liked the place.

"It's all right, I suppose," was his unenthusiastic reply. "I've lived there since it opened. I wouldn't say it was bad, but it has its disadvantages."

The bazar in Jerusalem offers nothing new. Nothing new to me, that is. I suppose that, had this been the first town I struck in which a typical bazar could be visited, I'd get the kick of a lifetime out of the place. But continued travel has spoiled me for these spots.

The same tiny streets, filled with dirt and slime. I will say that Jerusalem's market place did seem a little cleaner than many of the others, but there was a slight rain here during the early afternoon and that didn't make the streets any too pleasant.

WILL ROGERS SAYS

SANTA MONICA, Cal., March 18.

To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

I tell you things never was looking better. And Congress! I want to go on record as giving those rascals a world of credit. They have reformed and they look like they are sorry for what they have done for years. Nowadays Mr. Roosevelt just makes out a little list of things every morning that he wants them to do (that's kinder like a housewife's menu list). And for the first time in their lives they are acting like United States citizens and not like United States Senators or Congressmen. There has never been anything radically wrong with our lawmakers, only they thought they were thinking. Now we got a man to do their thinking for 'em, and the whole country is better off. Yours, WILL.

Joan Blondell In Davis

By WILLIAM T. SCHOYER

With a Broadway bad man who isn't so bad, and a childhood sweetheart who isn't so sweet, "Broadway Bad," in the Davis, manages to twist the old big city temptation set-up into a more interesting picture than usual.

Joan Blondell plays the chorus girl who "cashes in" on a broken heart and newspaper publicity to rise to stardom. She gives a pleasant and convincing performance. In the role of the slicker is Ricardo Cortez, restrained and forceful. Together they arrive at a happy ending, refreshingly different from what might have been feared at the beginning of the film.

Jack Oakie performs as a sailor boxer in the co-feature, "Sailor Be Good." In his usual irrepressible manner he falls in love with the heroine, Vivienne Osborne, at the beginning of the picture, only to wake up after celebrating a boxing victory to find himself maried to a society heiress.

Jack soon discovers that he and society life don't agree very well. Meanwhile the big bout for the championship of the navy is almost at hand. And the broken-hearted heroine has deserted him. A good fight finishes the show, though you might be able to guess the outcome.

Banish War Is Lesson In Penn

By GEORGE SEIBEL

Mr. Seibel

Friends of peace will derive great comfort in the Penn Theater from the picture, "Men Must Fight," in which the beautiful Diana Wynyard plays the part of a mother who educates her son to be a conscientious objector. The picture begins during the "war to end war," when the father of Diana's son is killed in an air expedition. Naturally she does not want her son to be sacrificed to the Moloch of Murder when a new war starts in 1940, and though her husband is Secretary of State she presides over a peace meeting which is broken up by a patriotic mob.

When she addresses this meeting and declares women must stop wars by refusing to furnish the men to bear arms, the note of "Lysistrata" is struck—and it evoked applause from the afternoon audience. But the mob spirit speedily sweeps all the country into the war fever, and she sees her own son flying off to the slaughter. Maybe it's the futuristic hat worn by his mother, 1940 model, that converts him.

"Do you believe in this war?" she asks him, and he replies, "No, it's a dirty rotten business, but I've got to go." And while the fliers are soaring to the work of destruction, the three women watching them utter ironical comments on the madness of the men who "must fight." The moral of the film, based on a play by Lawrence and Lauren, plainly is that it is the fools and cowards who are stampeded into fighting.

There are thrilling pictures of an air raid destroying sky scrapers and of a public meeting broken up by jingo hoodlums. Lewis Stone, Phillips Holmes and May Robson have moments of great acting, but Diana Wynyard is the impressive figure that carries cinviction in her message to friends of peace.

The short features this week are superlative, especially the picture of Leningrad and life under the Soviets in a Fitzpatrick travelogue. Uproarious fun marks a Laurel and Hardy comedy, while the Mickey Mouse cartoon is particularly swift and ingenious. Altogether this is one of the most intelligent and amusing programs the Penn has shown for months.

Runaway Horse Injures Motorist

A runaway horse collided with an automobile in Washington road late yesterday, injuring J. E. McKivergin, of 134 Mt. Lebanon boulevard, the driver of the machine. The horse also suffered injuries and was despatched by Mt. Lebanon police. It was owned by Guy B. Saxton, of 118 Seminole drive, Mt. Lebanon, owner of the Mt. Lebanon riding academy, of Library road.

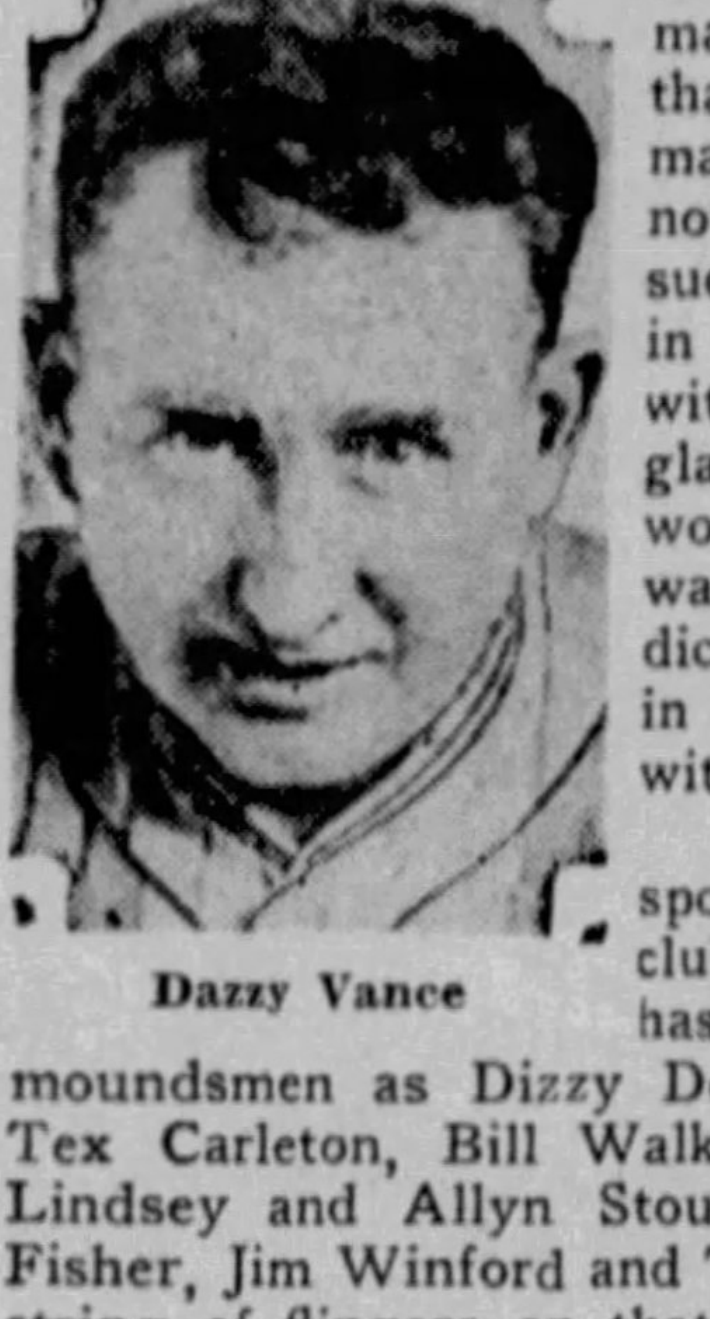
DAZ PUT IN BAD SPOT BY CARD STAFF

THE ANNOUNCEMENT THAT Dazzy Vance had ended his holdout and signed a Cardinal contract reported his new salary as being $8,000, as compared with $15,000 in Brooklyn last year, or a cut of approximately 47 per cent. It is a safe bet that the veteran pitcher originally demanded much more than $8,000 and did not come out of the salary argument as successfully as he had been wont to do in previous spring financial squabbles with the Dodger management. A glance at that St. Louis hurling staff would give the impression that Dazzy wasn't in a very good position to do any dictating. It was the toughest place in the majors for a pitcher to get away with a holdout.



Dazzy Vance

A slab holdout is hardly in the best spot that could be imagined when the club with which he is dickering already has on its flinging roster such capable moundsmen as Dizzy Dean, Bill Hallahan, Paul Derringer, Tex Carleton, Bill Walker, Jim Mooney, Jess Haines, Jim Lindsey and Allyn Stout, not to mention recruits like Al Fisher, Jim Winford and Ted Nobriga. A magnate owning a string of flingers on that order would not be thrown into a panic by a holdout on the part of a hurler of Vance's years.

IT ISN'T OFTEN that a world championship fight ends in a draw, as did the 15-rounder between Ben Jeby and Vince Dundee in New York last night, keeping Jeby on the middleweight throne. That's something like possession being nine points of the law. The champ has the advantage of two out of three possible decisions.

He can retain his crown by merely getting a draw, whereas the challenger must win to get anywhere. Comparisons with Marcel Thil are not so favorable to Jeby now, inasmuch as Thil beat Dundee in 12 rounds. Twice prior to last night's draw Dundee won decisions over Jeby.

ONE OF THE greatest runners of all time probably will be lost to the track game as a result of the automobile accident in which Bill Carr, University of Pennsylvania star, suffered a fracture of the pelvis. The doctors express the opinion that he never will run again.

Carr, champion quarter miler, was pronounced by many track experts the world's perfect runner when he defeated the great Ben Eastman twice last summer and won the 400-meter race in the Olympic Games in record time. It was only recently that he rounded into top form indoors for 1933, and he had appeared to be headed for another sensational year.

AMONG THE YANKEE recruits impressing Joe McCarthy and camp observers very favorably is a former Penn State man, Russell Van Atta, left-hand pitcher. His success in winning 23 games for a tail-end club at St. Paul last year was evidence that he had something, and in camp so far he has more than lived up to expectations. Van Atta reasons that it is easier to pitch in the majors than in the miners, if a hurler has the stuff, as he has a much better club behind him and doesn't have to work so often. For St. Paul last year the southpaw pitched more than 300 innings, which is a lot of leather to pour over the plate.

Bucky Harris

NO OTHER MANAGER in the majors is more pleased with his new material this year than Bucky Harris, of the Tigers. He is so confident of the ability of some of his recruits that even at this early stage he has pronounced four of them fixtures.

There is no doubt in the mind of the Detroit skipper that Henry Greenberg, a converted first sacker, is going to be the regular third baseman; that Marvin Owen will stick at the shortstop job; that Ervin Fox will be the third outfielder, or that Frank Reiber will be one of the three catchers.

FOX IS RATED one of the most impressive youngsters entering the big show this year. He can hit, run bases, field and throw. He has speed and a hook slide. In the minors he was a marvel of consistency in hitting, as in three seasons his average never varied more than three points.

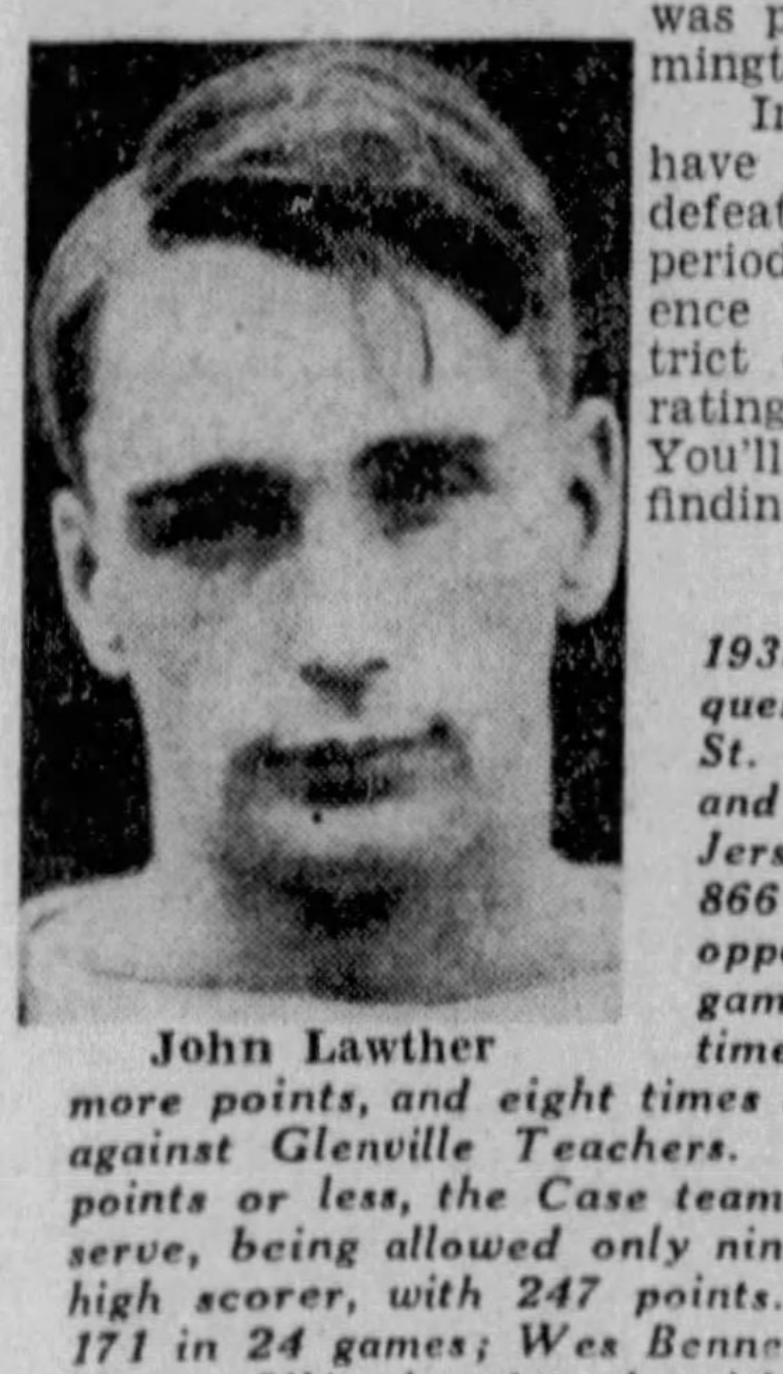
Greenberg, standing 6 feet 3 inches, was adjudged by some of the dopesters as too tall for third base, but he has developed so rapidly at the position that Harris predicts he will field better than the average third sacker and outhit any other third baseman in the American League.

THE LONGEST TRAINING that Maxie Rosenbloom ever did for a fight, he says, was three days. He counted them himself. "But I don't need much gym work," he explains. "I keep busy in the ring, and that keeps me in shape. I feel younger and stronger now than when I started fighting. I get a lot of fun out of fighting, though once in a while I get hit on the chin and then it isn't so funny. I've had 212 fights. Maybe I haven't saved any money, but I've had a lot of fun and made a lot of friends. Many boxers who skimped and saved their dough haven't any more money today than I have, and not nearly as many friends."

THE TURF SENSATION of the week in betting circles was the winning of a race at Tropical Park by Comstockery, paying the enormous odds of 114 to 1. As the price indicates, the horse had not been figured to have even an outside chance.

Many racing followers may have forgotten it, but time was when Comstockery was an outstanding stake horse that would have been quoted at 1 to 100, instead of the reverse, in the company he beat this week. Comstockery won the Union Hotel States at Saratoga as a 2-year-old in 1928 and was in the money in many other big events.

WHEN WESTMINSTER COLLEGE, after losing four crack players from last season's squad, made the remarkable showing of 19 victories in 25 basketball games this winter under Coach John Lawther, one of the greatest seven-year records in the entire country was placed to the credit of the New Wilmington school.



John Lawther

In the last seven campaigns the Titans have piled up 104 victories against only 21 defeats, a percentage of .832. In the same period, they have won five Tri-State Conference championships, four Pittsburgh district championships and two second-place ratings in the district and the Conference. You'll look around quite a while without finding anything to equal that.

AMONG THE HIGHLIGHTS of the 1933 season were victories over Duquesne, the best team in this section; St. John's, the best around New York, and John Marshall, a standout in New Jersey. The Titans scored a total of 866 points in 25 contests against 610 by opponents, an average of 34.6 points per game to 24.4 by opposing teams. Eight times, Coach Lawther's boys made 40 or more points, and eight times 30 or more, the high mark being 54 against Glenville Teachers. Seven opponents were held to 17 points or less, the Case team, which later defeated Western Reserve, being allowed only nine. Bill Douglass, captain-elect, was high scorer, with 247 points. Gerald Newton was second, with 171 in 24 games; Wes Bennett, third, with 132 in 15 games, and Mauno Siljander, fourth, with 92 in 21 games. Finishing the season with 19 wins against six defeats, and with a record of seven wins in 10 Tri-State Conference games, the Titans placed second in the Conference race, and second only to Duquesne in district achievement.

BUCCOS LOSE TO CHAMPS BY 4-3 SCORE

By CHARLES J. DOYLE,
Staff Correspondent

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., March 18.—Not that it means anything of importance, nevertheless the Pirates this morning were anxious to spank down the champion Cubs as a result of the proceedings at the Seals' Stadium yesterday. The Bruins copped the opening game of the exhibition series 4 to 3, and while there was no squawking in the Buccaneer camp, it is also true that the Pittsburghers don't like to see the Cubs get away with a thing.

For the second clash this afternoon Manager Gibson has nominated Ralph Birkofer and Leon Chagnon for mound duty. If the league champs can get past this classy pair of youngsters they deserve to win.

FIELDING FAST

A couple of scorching liners off the bats of Gus Suhr and Hal Finney with runners on the sacks were snagged by Stanley Hack and Mark Koenig in the clash of yesterday, else the Pirates might have copped the battle. Manager Grimm, himself out of action with some little ailment, elected to play on the lefthand weakness of the Pirates right at the outset. Charley sent two kid lefthanders to the slab and Carroll Yerkes and Roy Hanshaw won a close verdict over Larry French and Bill Harris. French was deadlocked with Yerkes when he left the game in the sixth. As is generally the case, the traditional rivals fought furiously for the decision.

The Pirates were quick to reach Yerkes. L. Waner pulled a single to right and he moved ahead on a passed ball. Lindstrom singled to left and Lloyd scored. P. Waner whistled a hit to right, Lindy taking third. Traynor hit into a force play as Lindstrom tallied.

CUBS REACH LARRY

French reeled off three rounds of shutout ball before he gave ground. Babe Herman crossed up Traynor and French with a perfect bunt with one out in the fourth. Stephenson followed with a single to center and Herman scooted to third. Hendrick walked. Campbell doubled to left center to score two runs. Hendrick was nailed at the plate when Jurgess grounded to Traynor.

Hal Finney, in the pinch-hitting role, put the Pirates in front in the sixth. Vaughan was on second with two out with Grace due to hit. Finney was slated to catch Harris and he batted for Grace against Lefty Henshaw. Hal drove a single to left and Vaughan scored.

Stephenson greeted Harris with a double in the sixth. Finney threw to center in trying to nip Stevie and the latter took third. Hendrick singled to score Riggs. Jurges' three-bagger tallied Hendrick.

Chilly Sauce

More than 1,500 native sons paid to see the Pirates and Cubs in their first encounter. This was good business in view of the fact that thousands are without funds of any kind.

Ty Cobb, who witnessed the scrap of the big leaguers, avers that least half of the people came out to see Honus Wagner.

It was this writer's pleasure to interview Cobb and Wagner on a local radio program last night. During the course of the broadcast the two great diamond luminaries went into a discussion of the 1909 world series that found a big response among local fans. Many of the Pirates listened in on Ty and Honus, who were showered with congratulations for their impromptu stunt.

On the return trip to the hotel from the station, Cobb went into an eloquent recital on Wagner. Maybe it was supposed to be

EXPLANATIONS OF RIPLEY'S CARTOONS OF YESTERDAY: SIR PUGILIST—Dan Donnelly (1786-1820) was knighted by King George IV when the latter was Prince Regent. The famous Irish champion's grave is surmounted by a tombstone, the epitaph on which is to the effect that "Knighthood he took from George's sword," and that "he died at last from the effect of 47 tumblers of punch he drank" on the eve of his death. THE SHAMROCK—This emblem of Ireland and of the Doctrine of Trinity has a history long antedating the Emerald Isle. It was sacred to the ancient Iranians of Persia 50 centuries ago as a symbol of their own deistic Trinity. In the recent excavations on the site of ancient Persepolis, the trefoil of clover occurs throughout on articles of personal adornment. In connection with Ireland, shamrock is first mentioned in a book printed in 1571, which refers to "shamrotes" (shamrock) as a "herbe the Irish feed upon."

The basketball championship of the Western Pennsylvania Interscholastic Athletic League will be decided in the Pitt Stadium pavilion tonight, when Duquesne High, champion of Section VII, engages New Castle High, champion of Section III, in the final battle of the twenty-first annual elimination series.

Phil Bridenbaugh

The finalists will be striving to win their second league championship, New Castle, coached by Phil Bridenbaugh, having held the crown in 1927, while Duquesne, coached by Ray Henry, was on the throne in 1928.

The winner earns the right to represent District VII in the play-offs for the state championship and will engage South High, City League champion and representative of District VIII, in the first inter-district game in the Pitt Stadium pavilion Tuesday evening.

DUQUESNE FAVORITE

New Castle, bidding for its third W. P. I. A. L. title, having won track championship and sharing in a three-way deadlock for the class AA football crown, takes the floor tonight the under-dog due to the fact its bracket in the elimination series was not as strong as that which Duquesne waded through to reach the finale.

Duquesne has appeared far more impressive in its elimination duels to date, and as a result is the popular choice of the fans to win the crown. Duquesne defeated Georges Township, 50-22; Rankin, 23-17, and Ambridge, 30-21, to enter the final round, while New Castle defeated Union Township, 51-24; Norwin, 30-19, and Monessen, 21-14, to reach the championship game

Both Duquesne and New Castle have flashed championship form in their early engagements in the tournament and if both show the same class tonight, fans are going to be treated to a close struggle.

STARS IN LINEUPS

The lineups of the two quintets are graced with names that have stood out prominently in the early rounds of the eliminations. Two of the best centers in the tournament will be pitted against each other in the championship game in Mike Radvansky, of Duquesne, and Joe Kelley, of New Castle.

Mike Zeleznik, Duquesne forward, and John Teplica, New Castle scoring ace, both have led the attacks for their respective teams and their scoring duel tonight should prove a thriller. The two boys are running neck-and-neck for the scoring laurels.

The Duquesne lineup will include Proksa at the other forward post and Wisbar and Krenitsky on the guard positions. New Castle will present Ridley at forward and Reiber and Kominic at the guards.

LOCAL SKATERS MEET BUFFALO

By CARL W. SHATTO

A team of former college stars, representing the Pittsburgh Hockey Association, will clash with the Nichols Alumni Hockey Association sextet, of Buffalo, at Duquesne Garden at 8 o'clock tonight.

Sweet charity is to be the beneficiary, for the proceeds are to be turned over to the Junior League of Pittsburgh's free milk stations. Because of the fact that only scholastic hockey has been offered here this season, the "big time" clash is expected to lure a capacity crowd.

Pittsburgh will line up with Morgan Schiller, former Yale star, in the nets; Tom Coulter, of Carnegie Tech, and Frank McSorley, ex-Notre Damer, at defense; George Lockhart, for three years a member of the Princeton varsity, at center, and Charles Lockhart, former Princetonian, and John McSorley, once a Notre Dame mainstay, at the wings.

The local spares will be Don Thompson, Jr., Bill Doolittle, Robert E. Carson III, and Dud Livingstone.

The Buffalo team has been campaigning throughout the season, and the locals are not likely to want for spirited and ample competition.

Lohr Beats Lytton In Billiard Duel

Harry Lohr gained a 50-50 standing in the annual city three-cushion billiard tournament last night, serving Sam Lytton his second defeat of the tourney, 50 to 49, in the Tobin parlors, Smithfield street.

Play will be resumed Monday night.

No. 18—Utility Shortstop Thomas Joseph Thevenow

SAN FRANCISCO, March 18.

Tommy, do you realize you're just about the hardest gent in the league to interview?

No, I hadn't thought of it, but I hope I am not as tough as all that.

You are, Tom, but it is to your credit and nobody ever has accused you of talking out of turn. You've been in the big show regularly since 1925, and you are admitted to be one of the finest defensive shortstops the sport has had, but the fans know little about you. How about a little information on yourself.

Tommy Thevenow

Tell them where you were born and when, how you started in baseball and how you broke into the sport as a profession.

Well, I was born in Centralia, Ill., September 6, 1903. I was not very big before I got my hands on a baseball and I liked the feel of it so much that I played a lot when I was a kid. I was on a semi-pro club of my home town back in 1922, when a player named George Distel saw me. He thought I had a chance to develop and secured me a job with the Joplin club, of the Western Association, for the following season. Gabby Street was the manager of the Joplin club. I played in 125 games in 1923, and the St. Louis Cardinals purchased me for $4,000.

That's the longest speech you've made since you joined the Pirates. It's right to the point, too. But how did you make out with the Cardinals in 1924?

I remained with them about one month and played in 20 odd games before I was shipped to the Syracuse club.

What happened in Syracuse?

I played short for that club for two seasons, but the Cardinals brought me back in 1925 in time for me to get into 50 games.

You had a banner year in 1926, the year the Cardinals won the world championship, didn't you?

I played in every game for the Cardinals that year and I was lucky enough to get through the world series in good shape.

How long did you remain with the Cards?

Until the finish of the 1928 season. We lost the world series that year. Right after it was over I was traded to the Phillies for Heinie Sand. I played two seasons at short for the Quakers and then came to the Pirates with Pitcher Claude Willoughby in return for Dick Bartell.

COUNTY LINKS FEES RAISED

By TOM BIRKS

Golfers chasing the elusive pellet over the North and South County Park links will pay $20 for their permits this season. This is a $10 increase since the links opened two seasons ago.

The boost was put into effect by the County Commissioners yesterday afternoon. Ever since the golf season officially closed last November, there has been talk regarding raising the annual fee. While the annual dues were raised, the daily fee of $1 remains the same.

The Commissioners also were in a mood to economize and as a result the golf professionals and the help around the courses will be paid on a six-months' basis.

Nothing was done by the Commissioners toward filling the pro job at North Park, held last season by Jimmy McFarland, or the greenkeeper position. It has been indicated that the positions will be filled by one man.

Last season 1,500 annual permits were taken out for South Park, netting $15,000, and in addition the green fees for the season amounted to approximately the same figure.

Koch, Baumgarten Get Bowling Posts

COLUMBUS, O., March 18.—(INS.)—Charles C. Koch, of Cleveland, was elected president and Elmer H. Baumgarten, of Milwaukee, secretary of the American Bowling Congress at the thirty-third annual meeting of the organization here yesterday.

Baumgarten, who has been president of the congress for the last year, will fill out the unexpired term of Abe Langtry, who was forced to resign because of ill health.

BASEBALL COMEDY

—By NICK ALTROCK—

BILOXI, Miss., March 18.—Don't forget the big league umpires take their regular dose of spring training, too. First an umper practices making sense out of words like YTKRLFP and QWNBHZ on an optician's chart. That peps up the old eyesight, so he can tell a ball from a strike.

Nick Altrock

Then the ump tries a little hitch-hiking to limber up his thumb. By getting the proper jerk of the thumb, an ump can call a guy out with all the gestures of Napoleon declaring war. Next the umper wanders around the house dusting off things with his whiskbroom. A couple of weeks of this and he's in the pink.

So then he gets himself a new blue serge suit, stuffs each pocket with a dozen baseballs, and he's all set for another season of calling 'em wrong.

PANTHERS WIN SEASON FINAL BY 38-21

By JESS CARVER

The 1932-33 collegiate basketball campaign was blasted out last night under a barrage of seventeens. Here, get a load of this—

Pitt won its seventeenth victory of the season, its seventeenth in a row over Carnegie Tech, won by a 17-point margin, scored 17 points in the first half and accomplished all this on the seventeenth of March. What's the answer? It's simple.

It must be 17.

And if you want to get tough about it, there were 17 free throws converted into points by the two teams and after spelling out Dr. Clifford Carlson and Tartans of Carnegie, you have only nine of the 26 letters in the old alphabet left, which means there are 17 letters in use.

The only thing that would have made matters more complete would have been to have had a Tarkington in the lineup.

FINAL OF SEASON

The curtain was dropped on the '33 campaign, and also on the varsity careers of six fine youngsters as Pitt beat Tech, 38-21, in the second clash of the campaign. Tech held the Golden Cats, who were in fine, fine fettle last night, pretty well in hand during the first 20 minutes of action, but faded as the second half got underway and went scoreless, while Pitt was putting the ball game in the ice box. The Panthers ran up 11 points in the second half before Tech could count, and then went on to outscore the Skibos, 21 to 8 after leading at the intermission, 17 to 13.

Capt. Don Smith and Rocco Cutri, of Pitt, completed their careers, as did Co-captains Bobby Smith and Red Fergus, of Tech, Eddie Stentz and Jerry Seigal. Poor Bobby Smith had his grand finale spoiled. He played only part of the time, handicapped by an injured arm and went scoreless. Fergus, however, who has been hitting 'em from all angles of late, took the scoring honors of the evening with a 10-point total, one more than was tallied by Pitt's dashing leader. The Pitt Smitty, however, was the big field goal man of the encounter, bagging four, all in the second half.

TECH TAKES LEAD

The "Battle of Seventeens" opened with Carnegie stepping out to a 4-0 advantage. The count was then tied at 6-6, again at 11-11 and still again at 13-13, but here Russ Ochsenhirt dumped the goal that put Pitt ahead for good. Lanky Russ, by the way, turned in a nifty ball game throughout. The lineup:

SWIMMERS IN ERIE

Coach Pat Corr's crack Pitt swimming team is in Erie today, where the Panthers will compete in four A. M. A. championship events, the senior 220-yard free style, 200-yard breast stroke, 150-yard back stroke and junior 100-yard back stroke races.

Pitt has been declared co-champion with Rutgers of the Eastern Intercollegiate Swimming Association. Each team won three meets and lost none.

Mrs. Hill Bows To Miss Orcutt

AUGUSTA, Ga., March 18.—(AP.)—Shooting sub-par golf all the way, Miss Maureen Orcutt, of Englewood, N. J., yesterday won the Augusta women's invitation golf tournament from Mrs. O. S. Hill, of Kansas City.

It was the first major victory of the year for the New Jersey star, one of the ranking players of the nation. It also enabled her to even with Mrs. Hill for a defeat she received earlier in the season in Florida.

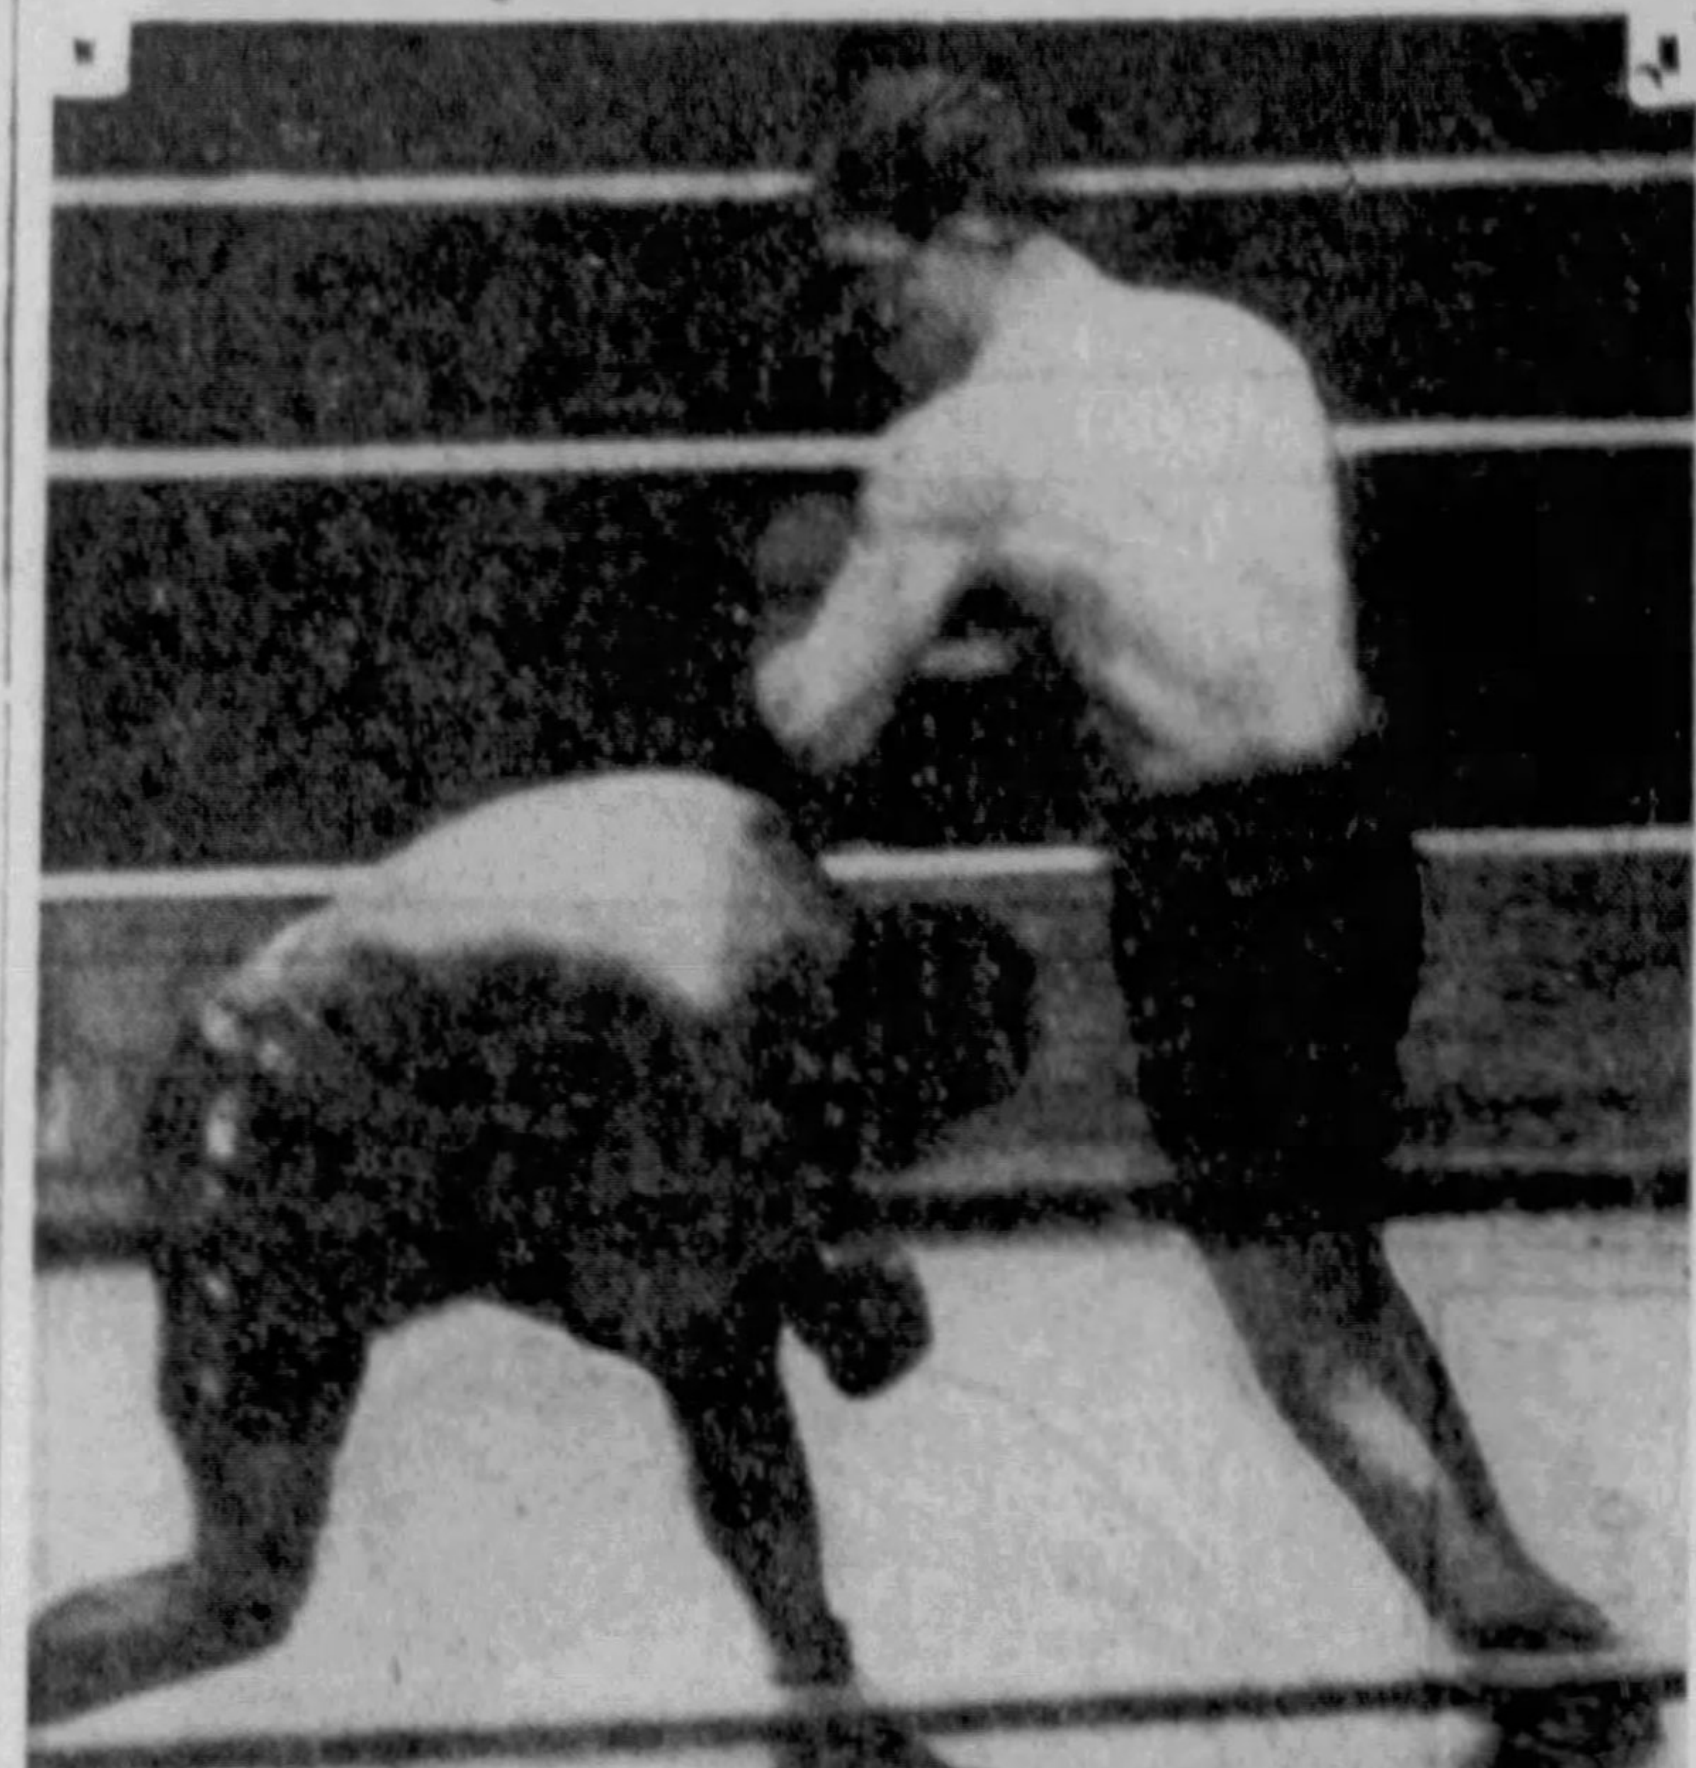
Tracey Cox Wins Here



BILLY HOLT TRACEY COX

high and indications are that the best turnout of the tournament will be on hand.

The preliminary arrangements for the opening of the inter-district play in the state eliminations were to be completed this afternoon when the P. I. A. A. officials gathered in the Fort Pitt Hotel. C. Lawrence Walsh, supervisor of athletics in the city schools, will represent District VIII, while H. W. Crane, president of the W. P. I. A. L., will be the spokesman for the District VII schools.

FIVE CHAMPS SET

Champions were crowned in five districts of the P. I. A. A. last night. In District III, Lancaster won the title, beating Lititz 28 to 21. Palmerton won in District XI by beating Summit Hill, 24 to 18. In District IX, DuBois took the crown after toppling Warren, 33 to 20. Boswell won out in District V, beating Shade Township, 27 to 7, and Altoona copped in District VI, upsetting Phillipsburg, 32 to 8.

In a semi-final game in District II, Scranton Tech defeated Pittston, 41 to 21, and in District X, Oil City eliminated Grove City, 21 to 14, and Erie East tripped Girard, 28 to 25.

W. VA. TEAMS ADVANCE

BUCKHANNON, W. Va., March 18.—Victory High, of Clarksburg; Elkins, Gary and Charleston prepared today to battle in the semi-final round of the annual state scholastic basketball tournament, which will be concluded on the West Virginia Wesleyan gymnasium floor here tonight. The semi-final games are slated for this afternoon.

Elkins, tourney favorite, trailed by 10 to 5 at the end of the first period of its game with Martinsburg last night, but rallied to win, 36 to 16.

Victory came through with a sparkling victory over Wellsburg, 33 to 18. Gary won over Beckley, 30 to 21, and Charleston rallied to defeat the crack Ceredo Kenova passers, 32 to 28.

PIRATES, CUBS CLASH AGAIN

"Honus, listen to me. This is going to be the most wonderful year you ever had in baseball. I never was any more serious in my life. Don't you know that you don't belong to yourself; you belong to baseball and the public? Can't you see that every young kid in uniform loves you like they love their fathers? You are a national figure, millions want to see you in uniform. There's not any call for baseball around here now in view of conditions, but they are going out to see you."

I was surprised at the sentiment Cobb held for Wagner, and, speaking of sentiment, it might be worthy of note to mention that in picking all-star clubs of the National and American League over a period of 30 years, Honus and Cobb each named Jimmy Collins for third base. Collins played in both the major circuits.

In view of the fever of baseball which seized Cobb since Wagner came to town, it would not be surprising to see him return to baseball. Ty is said to be wealthy and has a fine home in a pretty suburb.

Bojarski Victor Over Joe Marcus

ERIE, Pa., March 18.—(AP.)—Frankie Bojarski, 140½, of Erie, won a decision from Joe Marcus, 139, of Pittsburgh, in a 10-round bout last night. The bout was slow and uninteresting, with Bojarski outboxing Marcus.

Jimmy Gilligan, 118, of Pittsburgh, took the decision from Jarry Boyle, 120, of Meadville, in a six-round encounter.

Joey Brown, 145, of Erie, won a decision over Eddie Pinczewski, 145¾, of Erie, in a six-round bout. Young Canada Lee, 120, of Erie, knocked out Jack McCann, 113, of Pittsburgh, in the fourth round of a six-round bout.

SWIM MARK FALLS

PHILADELPHIA, March 18.—(AP.)—John Macionis, Philadelphia school boy, who claims the world record in the 220-yard free style swimming event, last night broke the Middle Atlantic A. A. U. record in the 200-yard event by stroking the distance in 2:04.1.

REFEREE SAVES JEBY'S TITLE

NEW YORK, March 18.—(Universal)—Vincent Lazzaro, of Baltimore, better known as Vincent Dundee, won the world middleweight championship last night, but two judges and a referee declined to pass the title.

For the greatest part of 15 rounds, Dundee battered Ben Jeby, the defending champion, and reduced his face to gory pulp, only to get a draw decision that drew forth a storm of protest from a crowd of about 12,000 in Madison Square Garden.

The judges were in hearty disagreement. Charles Lynch voted for Dundee. Eddie Farrell gave it to Jeby. Eddie Forbes, the referee, called it a draw. Dundee was stunned more by the announcement of the verdict than by any blow Jeby delivered.

The press and the spectators were virtually unanimous in the belief that Dundee had won. Most of the boxing writers at the ringside gave Dundee nine, 10 or 11 rounds.

TRIBE HOLDOUT PAIR WEAKEN

NEW ORLEANS, March 18.—(AP.)—Wesley Ferrell, Cleveland's ace pitcher and only remaining holdout, can earn the $15,000 he wants for this year's work if he wins 25 games.

The temperamental twirler originally asked $18,000, but came down three notches when President Alva Bradley showed no sign of raising his $12,000 offer. Whereupon General Manager Billy Evans countered with this proposition:

"He must sign a $12,000 contract, but if he wins 20 games he will receive an additional $2,000. For 25 games, the number he says he can and will win, he will be paid another $1,000, or $15,000."

Willis Hudlin, the other pitcher who didn't like the first contract offered, yesterday met terms Evans said were identical with the original.

AUSTIN, Tex.—(AP.)—A six-run rally in the second inning, featured by home runs from the bats of Greenberg and Reiber, both recruits, enabled the Detroit Tigers to win their first exhibition game of the season from University of Texas here yesterday, 11 to 6.

BILOXI, Miss.—(AP.)—Although the Washington Senators trounced the New Orleans Pelicans, 11 to 2 yesterday after the Mississippians had beaten Cleveland, Manager Joe Cronin hauled out the heavy artillery for today's set-to with the Indians.

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla.—(AP.)—George Blaeholder, the big right-handed pitcher of the St. Louis Browns, having his first workout yesterday, was the center of attraction. Blaeholder cut loose with a lot of fast balls for about five minutes until Coach Sothoron saw him and called a halt.

ORLANDO, Fla.—AP.)—Two huge four-base blows by the big league home run king, Jimmy Foxx, enabled the Philadelphia Athletics to whip the Montreal Maroons, 9 to 8, in a 10-inning contest yesterday. Both of Foxx's drives came with the bases empty.

PASADENA, Cal.—(AP.)—Jimmy Dykes not only is expected to play a lot of third base for the Chicago White Sox this year, but his presence promises to be a big help to Luke Appling. Appling is slated to do the bulk of the work at shortstop, and with Dykes handy to steady him, figures to become a star at the job.

HOLT BEATEN BY COX IN ARENA BOUT

By HARRY KECK

Sports Editor.

It took Tracey Cox, of Indianapolis, to save St. Patrick's night for the Irish at the Arena, on the North Side, last night. After Negro boxers had won the first three bouts, two of them by technical knockouts, the compactly built 140-pounder came on to beat Billy Holt, Homewood Negro 147-pounder, decisively in the windup.

The bout wasn't very exciting until Cox began to press for a knockout victory in the closing stages. He hurt Holt frequently, but always let him recover. His best effort was a short right to the chin that caused Holt to sag slowly to the floor, but rebound and rise without a count in the tenth round.

HOLT RESPECTS PUNCH

Cox, noted as a deadly right hand puncher, also worked a left hook to advantage and at times shifted to a southpaw stance for a few moments. He dominated the fight in every round, with Holt showing a great deal of respect for his hitting prowess, and Billy is no cream puff puncher himself.

Cox was warned twice for hitting low with his left in the second round and again at the start of the third, while Holt was cautioned for striking foul territory in the fifth.

Jackie Wilson, Holt's featherweight stablemate, turned in a neat victory over Johnny Mitchell, of Detroit, in the semi-final 10-rounder. He was too fast and won every round, Mitchell being unable to catch up with him and taking a boxing lesson. Jackie was slowed down only once, in the eighth round, when a right to the head sent him into the ropes.

TWO TECHNICAL KAYOS

Referee Joe Zivic stopped the second bout, a scheduled 10-round return battle between Ray Lyle, of Akron, and Anson Green, Homestead Negro middleweight, at the end of the fourth round to save Lyle from further punishment. He had a badly cut left eye, and had been punched around throughout. The first meeting between this pair, in the same ring, earlier in the season, resulted in a sensational six-round draw.

Red Bruce, Negro middleweight, of the Hill, won by a technical knockout over Red Bush, of Cumberland, after only one minute and 20 seconds of the first round of the opener. A left to the body, followed by a right to the jaw, sent Bush over the lower rope. He got up at the count of eight, but was helpless, and Referee Jack Henderson intervened.

Between Rounds

Tony Sciolino, of Buffalo, who boxes Pete Gulotta, of New York, in the eight-round semi-final to the Tony Herrera-Eddie (Kid) Wolfe bout in Motor Square Garden next Monday night, has boxed Tommy Paul and has been matched with both Fidel LaBarba and Seaman Watson in bouts which did not come off. He was around here a year or so ago, working out with Frank Klaus' boxers in Braddock, and plans to move his headquarters to Pittsburgh.

Whether or not Mose Butch boxes Tommy Paul in Motor Square Garden before heading for the Coast depends upon whether or not the Garden will give him the purse to which his manager thinks he is entitled, instead of the percentage offered him.

Red Bruce wants to fight Carl Montebano, who stopped Paul Pirrone at the Garden last Monday night.

Charleston, Victory, Gary, Elkins Win

BUCKHANNON, W. Va., March 18.—(A.)—Gary vs. Charleston and Elkins vs. Victory—that is the lineup today for the semi-nals in the annual West Virginia High School basketball tournament.

Elkins and Victory are favored in speculation as the state's scholastic floor fans await impatiently the playing of the games, to be followed by the finals today. Yesterday's results:

Charleston, 32; Ceredo-Kenova, 28.

Elkins, 36; Martinsburg, 16.

Victory, 33; Wellsburg, 18.

By PAUL G. SULLIVAN

Lou Alman's crack Y. M. H. A. contingent can clinch mathematically today the City Handball League Class A and Class B titles which they have already bagged to all practical intents and purposes. As matters stand and with two team tussles remaining before the close of hostilities a week from today, the Bellefielders need cop but two individual verdicts in the upper division and one in the lower to stow away the trophies regardless of what rival crews may accomplish in the win line. You can write it on the ice that the Almanites will fulfill contract, too!

This afternoon's inter-club bill calls for invasion of Y. M. H. A. territory by P. A. A. and visit of the Keystone delegation to Downtown Y. M. C. A. in the A sector, while Y. M. H. A. is entertained by the Winged Headers and Y. M. C. A. treks to the Keystone Club in the B classification.

In the squash racquets realm, quarter-final contests of the P. A. A. intra-mural handicap tournament feature the week-end card. In third frame competition yesterday, Graham McCargo downed Dr. G. D. Dunmire, 2-0, and Carl Wolfe trimmed Dr. Hube Wagner, 2-1, to round out the bracket of eight, which offers the following torrid engagements: Dr. Dave O'Loughlin vs. Rod Flannery, Graham McCargo vs. G. W. Kepler, Bill Hutchins vs. Karl Wolfe and Dr. Whitey Stegeman vs. Frank McClintock.

AUTO SMASH INJURES BILL CARR

PHILADELPHIA, March 18.—(INS.)—Injuries suffered in an automobile accident last night may end the athletic career of Bill Carr, University of Pennsylvania 400-meter Olympic champion.

Carr suffered a possible fractured pelvis and injuries to both ankles and his right hip when he was thrown from the running board of an automobile as it collided with another car.

By coincidence, Lawson Robertson, the Penn track coach who developed Carr as a champion runner, passed the scene of the accident a few minutes later and rushed his star pupil to a hospital.

Seward H. French, Jr., of Binghamton, N. Y., a senior and classmate of Carr, who hails from Pine Bluff, Ark., was driving the automobile. He and two girls riding with him escaped injury.

DAZZLER SIGNS WITH CARDS

BRADENTOWN, Fla., March 18.—Things were looking up in the camp of the St. Louis Cardinals here today following the falling into line of Dazzy Vance, one of the outstanding hurlers of the past decade. Vance, obtained in a trade with the Brooklyn Dodgers, signed a contract yesterday. He is reported to have taken a $7,000 cut from the $15,000 he drew as a member of the Dodgers.

Rickey announced that Catchers William Delancey and John O'Flaherty had been sent to the Columbus American Association club, a Cardinal farm.

N. L. Briefs

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla.—(AP.)—Manager Bill McKechnie yesterday based his hopes on young pitchers and his Boston Braves dropped a 5-1 game to the Phillies. The tribal batters pounded a total of nine hits, one more than their rivals, but were unable to bunch them.

TAMPA, Fla.—(AP.)—George Grantham, regular second sacker for the Cincinnati Reds, will be lost to the team for at least a week as the result of a spike wound received in an intra-club game yesterday. Clarence Blair, acquired from the West Coast, will replace Grantham at second against the Philadelphia Athletics today and tomorrow. Larry Benton, veteran pitcher, signed his contract yesterday.

LOS ANGELES—(AP.)—A seventh inning rally staged by the New York Giants here yesterday gave them a 6-to-5 victory over the Hollywood club of the Pacific Coast League in a spring training exhibition game. Manager Bill Terry switched his bating order for the game, putting Mel Ott in the cleanup position. He contributed a long home run over the right field fence in the sixth.

McNaugher Passers Cop School Title

The McNaugher School basketball team captured the city grade school title yesterday afternoon on the Fifth Avenue High School floor, defeating the Frick passers, 21 to 15.

Moon Run Meets McKnights Today

The Castle Shannon McKnights and the Moon Run soccer elevens meet in the semi-final round of the West Penn junior cup at the Westinghouse High School Stadium this afternoon, with the kickoff scheduled for 3 p. m.

Three weeks ago the same clubs met in the national amateur tourney and a slam-bang battle resulted in an overtime period with the McKnights winning, 4 to 3.

Ouimet's GOLF

By FRANCIS OUIMET

Former National Amateur and Open Champion.

Golf fundamentals are so firmly ingrained in Gene Sarazen's game that he suffers few slumps in scoring. Rather it might be said of him that on some days he just scores lower than on others, and that means that on those particular days par is due to take one man-sized walloping at his hands. The peculiar thing is that Gene seems to be able to turn on these scoring sprees when he really desires, when something vital is at stake. In both the British and American opens and later in his world championship match with Olin Dutra his game rose to the occasion. Perhaps that was because Gene was particularly interested in these affairs, and, being intent on winning, could key up his game to its highest pitch and thus romp home with something to spare.

Francis Ouimet

It would appear that the more important the stakes the better Gene's game becomes. This is something that not every golfer possesses. All too many of them stand in awe of the tremendous advantages a victory in such a tournament would mean. With Sarazen it is different. He is one of those colorful personalities known as a money player. He can rise to the heights when the rising means something. Walter Hagen during his many years of winning tournaments was another. There aren't so many of them and when one appears he is not soon forgotten. There will be others to appear, of course. They add a glamor to the game that gains the interest of the multitude. The eyes of the gallery are fixed upon them and without a doubt they do much to draw new addicts to the game. Take away such figures from the game for awhile and it undoubtedly would suffer in the same way boxing has suffered without a Dempsey to draw the customers through the turnstiles.

STRIVES TO IMPROVE

Sarazen, just turned 31, seems due for many more years of first-class golf. There will be players to challenge his supremacy, but it appears that there will be no sharp disintegration of Gene's game. On present form, he bids fair to keep up the pace for some little time. One thing in his favor is his attitude toward the game. He is not a defensive player in any sense of the term. He plays his shots boldly, oftentimes his shots are daring. He experiments always with the view in mind of bettering his play. For years he strengthened his grip with a heavy 30-ounce driver and he has devoted as much time to all the shots in his bag. Sarazen practices painstakingly, leaving no stone unturned that might upset him later on. Last year before he departed these shores to participate in the British Open he played every day over his Lakeville course on Long Island. The more inclement the weather the more he liked it. He realized that he was more than likely to meet just such blustery breezes over there and was preparing in his thorough way to meet every contingency that might arise. These long days of hard work repayed him tenfold later on when he annexed the crown.

A PUTTING MARVEL

His latest victory over Dutra seems in keeping with the personality he brings to the game. Sarazen is confident, whereas Dutra, at times, is inclined to exaggerate any fault that may arise in his shotmaking. Though he has scored brilliant rounds the past year in numerous tournaments, he is just coming into his own in the game. He is not yet the veteran campaigner that Gene is. Those three rounds of Sarazen's 67, 68 and 67, might have defeated Dutra any day of his career, but the Californian has seen tournaments when he scored somewhat in this neighborhood. At that, he played great golf in this match and had not Sarazen's putter been so deadly might have fared better. Gene picked up some 23 strokes on the putting green. There was no need for the eight-inch cup Sarazen advises here. If he keeps up this deadly putting pace they might well let the others play for the eight-inch cup and confine Sarazen to one of the regulation size.

DUKES BEAT MONESSEN

PITT, DUQUESNE BOXERS REACH TITLE ROUND

MORGANTOWN, W. Va., March 18.—(AP.)—West Virginia's slugging boxers, winners of the team title in the Intercollegiate Boxing Conference, led the parade into the finals for individual fistic honors.

The Mountaineers qualified six men for the conference finals tonight, while Pitt, Temple and Duquesne placed two each.

GIANNATI VICTOR

Pitt placed Jimmy Giannati, 135-pound star, and Jack Shricker, defending champion in the 155-pound class in the finals. Freddie Moore, of Duquesne, holder of the 145-pound division crown, and Cyril Brain, 115-pounder, carried the colors of the Dukes into the final round.

Peter D' Alessandro, Temple's Conference champ, scored a technical knockout over Henry Littlenales, of W. & J., after 58 seconds of the first round. All other bouts were decided by decisions.

ORANGE STARS LEAD

STATE COLLEGE, Pa., March 18.—(AP.)—Syracuse, the defending champion, is in a fine position today as regards defense of its laurels in the eastern intercollegiate boxing championships, with six men in the finals along with 10 representatives of five other colleges. Only Dartmount, competing for the first time, failed to come up with at least one finalist in the prelims yesterday.

Paced by Al Wertheimer and Joe Moran, who were defending individual crowns they won last year, the Syracuse squad came through with only two defeats in the preliminary bouts and semi-finals.

Army and Western Maryland each had three finalists, Penn State two and Yale and Massachusetts Tech one apiece.

Moran, who won the 155-pound title in 1932 and who has lost only one bout in his college fistic career, was the hit of the evening as he stopped Monroe Kessler, of Penn State, after 56 seconds of the second round. The Syracuse captain declind to wear the orange colors of his school on St. Patrick's Day and climbed into the ring wearing a white jersey. The summary:

SUTTER, MANGIN GAIN FINAL

NEW YORK, March 18.—(AP.)—A new power in indoor tennis, Clifford B. Sutter, of New Orleans, prepared today to battle Gregory S. Mangin, of Newark, defending champion, in the finals of the thirty-fourth annual indoor championship tournament on the boards of the 7th Regiment Armory.

Playing in only his third indoor tourney, Sutter, former intercollegiate champion from Tulane, trounced Frank Shields, tall, powerful New York youngster, in five bitter sets, 2-6, 2-6, 6-3, 6-4, 6-4, yesterday.

Mangin, master of the indoor game, though he rates none too highly outdoors, polished off Sidney B. Wood, blond former Wimbledon champion, 9-11, 6-2, 6-4, 6-4.

Fight Results

At Arena, North Side—Tracey Cox defeated Billy Holt, 10 rounds; Jackie Wilson defeated Johnny Mitchell, 10 rounds; Anson Green won by technical knockout over Ray Lyle, 5 rounds; Red Bruce won by technical knockout over Red Bush, 1 round.

At Erie—Frankie Bojarski defeated Joe Marcus, 10 rounds; Jimmy Gilligan defeated Jerry Boyle, 6 rounds; Joey Brown defeated Eddie Pinczewski, 6 rounds; Young Canada Lee knocked out Jack McCann, 4 rounds.

At New York—Ben Jeby and Vince Dundee drew, 15 rounds; Bep Van Klaveren defeated Baby Joe Gans, 8 rounds; Jack Portney defeated Joe Bernal, 5 rounds; Tony Dominquez and Salvatore Affinito drew, 5 rounds; Solly Kreiger knocked out Connie Josenio, 2 rounds.

At Philadelphia—Billy Ketchel defeated Johnny Peppe, 10 rounds; oJe McHale defeated Al Diamond, 8 rounds; Johnny Craven knocked out Tommy Conway, 3 rounds; Bill Hendrie defeated Sammy Ryan, 6 rounds; Walter Kirk defeated Bud Krausse, 6 rounds.

STOCKS RALLY UNDER RAIL LEADERSHIP

NEW YORK, March 18.—(AP.)—The stock market rallied moderately under leadership of the rails in the early trading today.

Some fractional losses scored at the opening were converted into gains of like proportion. Delaware & Hudson rose 2 points, while advances of a point were made in Case, American Sugar Refining and Union Pacific. United States Steel, International Harvester and American Can rose major fractions.

Weekend business surveys generally described trade as looking up, although most analysts found it too early to measure much actual progress in that direction. With business statistics appearing this week badly distorted by the banking holiday, it was difficult to draw conclusions from them.

Probably what attracted more attention in financial quarters than anything else was the new farm relief measure, granting the Secretary of Agriculture sweeping emergency powers. The grain and cotton trades were badly confused as to the import of this momentous measure.

The dollar continued to hold up well in the initial foreign exchange dealings. Sterling cables opened at $3.46⅜, off ¼ of a cent, while the French franc recovered ¼ of a point to 3.94⅜ cents.

FARMERS GET CROP LOANS

WASHINGTON, March 18.—(AP.)—The first checks in the disbursement of the 1933 crop production loans were sent to farmers yesterday by the Department of Agriculture.

Issuance of the checks was postponed because of the bank holiday, but was begun as soon as a transfer of funds from the Reconstruction Corporation was completed. A total of $90,000,000 is available for the loans this year.

C. W. Warburton, in charge of the loan organization, said more than 100,000 applications had been received here and at regional offices.

The amount any farmer can borrow is limited to $300, and he is required to reduce his acreage of cash crops 30 per cent under last year, except within specified minimum limits, to be eligible for a loan. The loans are repayable next October 31, with interest at 5½ per cent.

'SOUP' TO ASK BIG LOAN

WASHINGTON, March 18.—(AP.)—The Southern Pacific Company has asked the Interstate Commerce Commission to authorize it to borrow $22,000,000 from the Reconstruction Corporation.

This is the first application for a loan made by the Southern Pacific Company itself. The St. Louis Southwestern Railway, a subsidiary of the Southern Pacific, has secured approximately $18,000,000 from the corporation.

The Southern Pacific would use the money it asks to pay maturing bonds and equipment trust obligations; meet interest on bonds and equipment trust obligations and pay other "corporate requirements."

GRAIN VALUES TURN DOWN

CHICAGO, March 18.—More than a cent a bushel loss in wheat values took place early today. Sellers predominated in the wheat pit, with unfavorable opinions by brokers of the administration agricultural program the chief apparent influence. Opening ⅛ to ⅞ down, wheat afterward dropped further. Corn started unchanged to ⅛ higher, and subsequently underwent a decided setback.

CORPORATE EARNINGS

Phelps Dodge Corporation reports for 1932 consolidated net loss for the year of $3,752,252. This compares with a loss of $5,057,000 in 1931. The report pointed out that the 1932 deficit "includes heavy expenses incident to the closing down of our mines and the curtailment of operations at all our branches and divisions and is after providing $993,345 for depreciation of plants." Notwithstanding the book loss incurred, the company improved its cash position during the year. This item totaled $8,597,718 as against $7,206,629 at the close of 1931. Current assets amounted to $26,251,766, while current liabilities totaled $5,026,498.

City Ice and Fuel Company reports sales of $23,754,735 for 1932, a reduction of $6,284,148 from the previous year. Net profits were $4,025,578, a decline of $2,808,601 from 1931. The 1932 net equals $2.34½ a share on 1,165,194 common shares against $4.43 the preceding year.

Aluminum Industries, Inc., report for 1932 shows net loss of $70,889 after charges and depreciation, compared with net profit of $134,142 after charges and taxes in 1931.

Advance in Commodities Improves Corporate Profit Outlook

Based on a number of indices, commodity prices now are somewhere around 10 per cent above the level prevailing before the banking holiday, a level which had been maintained since late 1932. A 10 per cent rise in commodities brings a radical change in the picture of many industries, and improves profit-making possibilities. The rise in commodity prices has taken place so abruptly that there is a general attitude of skepticism as to whether the new level for commodities can be held. If the present level is maintained, the higher range may serve as a background for a further advance in security prices. Stocks at present are at about the same level which prevailed early in January.

According to reports from Texas, the situation in the East Texas fields is becoming more acute daily. Belief is spreading that unless the big illegal production of crude is checked in the near future, the price structure will be lowered. Reports are current that oil in that field is available at as low as 2 cents a barrel, which is one-half of the posted price.

Salaries drawn by American Tobacco Company officials last year and details of the employes' stock subscription plan of 1930, which has been the subject of controversy among stockholders are set forth in pamphlet sent to stockholders by George W. Hill, the company's president. Hill disclosed that his total compensation last year was $789,500, or $262,700 less than he received in 1931. He listed his salary at $120,000 and additional compensation at $669,500. In 1931 salary was $160,000 and additional compensation $891,570. Charles F. Neiley and Vincent Riggio, vice presidents, whose fixed salaries last year were $50,000 each, received additional compensation totaling $401,700.

Railroad equipment makers in this country have suffered an enormous shrinkage in their business, but the annual report of the Canadian Locomotive Company for 1932 contains a note which indicates that Canadian equipment makers have suffered even more extensively. "No locomotive orders have been placed in Canada since June 30, 1930," the president says. The dearth of orders represents a long time record. As the president insists, "any marked improvement in railway earnings would warrant the railways in adopting some definite policy of replenishment."

Aside from farm relief discussions, Wall street found little to occupy its attention. February foreign trade figures were lower than January's, both for imports and exports, though a favorable balance of $17,000,000 was held. Last month's outgoing shipments of merchandise were the smallest for any February in the present century. Wholesale prices, according to the Department of Labor's index, advanced last week, though this was hardly surprising in view of the rise in commodity spot prices during the bank holiday. An expansion in wholesale and retail trade incident to bank reopenings was reported by Dun & Bradstreet, Inc.

Many brokerage houses and individual traders construed the proposed farm bill as bearish, saying it tended to restrict consumer use of commodities. Assertions were made by numerous traders that but for the proposed legislation wheat yesterday would have scored a fresh 5-cent advance to the maximum limits permitted. One large grain house issued a statement that in practical application the proposed agricultural bill meant the basic value of United States wheat would be the world price, and that to export the present domestic surplus the price of wheat must decline to a world level. Pending such an adjustment, caution in making wheat purchases was urged.

First Quarter Income Accounts to Show Bank Holiday

By GEORGE H. SNYDER

SUSPENSIONS OF BANK activities during the latter part of February and the early days of March, added to the general bank holiday from March 4 to the early part of the past week, have resulted in an effect upon the income accounts of most industrial organizations which will make it necessary to revise estimates of profits or losses for the first quarter.

Until two weeks ago it appeared likely that the leading industrial corporations would report results for the first quarter varying only slightly from the final three months of 1932. Such estimates were based on the fact that the year started at the low pace established during the final weeks of December and that the recovery was no more rapid than the decline which took place in the last three months in 1932.

* * *

Recovery May Be Quicker in Future

THE GENERAL BANK holiday made buyers unwilling to contract for new materials. Even though they might have orders on hand, they became hesitant about accepting material when collection and payment was subject to so many uncertain factors.

Operations of such fundamental industries as steel should be closely watched in the coming weeks. They will provide an indication of the resiliency of business—of its ability to overcome obstacles placed in its path.

A rapid recovery in industrial operations will indicate that the affect of the bank trouble has been of a temporary nature. A slow recovery will indicate that the bank difficulties have wiped out the progress of the past six months.

First Quarter Reports Not to Be Significant

THE ABNORMAL CONDITIONS prevailing in many parts of the country during the latter days of February and in all parts of the country during the first two weeks in March provide a basis for the belief that the first quarter statements of industrial corporations will not be indicative of the general trend of business. Too many factors have presented adverse affects which do not represent any normal trend.

The reports of industrial corporations for the first quarter of 1933 must be considered in much the same light as those for the year of 1932. They will represent water over the dam—not indications of a current trend. They must be regarded as ancient history since the bank troubles have thrown them out of their normal relationships to current business affairs.

SOUTHERN FARE SLASH OK'D

WASHINGTON, March 18.—(AP.)—Five railroads in the South have been authorized by the Interstate Commerce Commission to lower passenger fares over their lines.

The Louisville and Nashville, the Nashville, Chattanooga and St. Louis, the Mobile and Ohio, the Atlanta and West Point, and the Western Railway of Alabama, were authorized to charge 2 cents per mile for passengers riding in coaches and 3 cents for sleeping and parlor cars.

The Pullman surcharge, which has been in effect for many years, was abolished during the period of the 3-cent sleeping and parlor car rate.

The fares are an experiment and are to be in effect for six months after the change from 3.6 cents per mile is made.

The move for the reduction was started by the Louisville and Nashville, which controls the Nashville, Chattanooga and St. Louis and runs some if its trains over the other roads.

Colgate Regains Company Control

NEW YORK, March 18.(INS.)—S. Bayard Colgate yesterday was elected president of the Colgate-Palmolive-Peet Corporation indicating that the Colgate family from now on would have a more important place in the management of the company.

C. S Pearce, formerly president, was elected chairman of the board and A. W. Peet was elected honorary chairman.

D. M. Compton, vice president, treasurer and general manager of Grigsby-Grunow Company, radio and refrigerator manufacturers, has resigned.

LOCAL BREWING SECURITIES RECEDE

Brewing stocks fell back fractionally on the Pittsburgh Stock Exchange in today's short session but the declines were not extended after the initial trading and activity in the shares subsided quickly.

Independent Brewing common showed the largest loss, declining ¾ of a point from last night's closing figure. Fort Pitt Brewing was off a smaller fraction.

The fuels continued quiet and only a few scattered trades were recorded in this division. The price structure held steady, however, in the face of the spreading movement toward gas rate reductions.

PICK-UP NOTED IN STEEL DEMAND

By B. E. V. LUTY

As the end of the week approached buying of steel began to pick up after the dull spell, and a continuous increase is expected until the volume equals or exceeds that of the forepart of February, before the Michigan holiday proclamation of February 14 started things on the down grade.

Production of steel ingots this week was at about 13 per cent of capacity, against 15 per cent last week, 17 per cent the week before and somewhat over 20 per cent in the week ended February 11. The balance of probability is that next week will show a slight increase.

Throughout the steel trade a very sanguine feeling has developed, due chiefly to the vigor and rapidity with which things have been moving at Washington.

The present appraisal of the steel trade leaves the automobile industry as an uncertain factor. In other directions it is expected that steel demand will work its way back to where it would have been had not the banking trouble developed. Production had risen from an average rate of 15 per cent in December to a rate of at least 21 per cent in the week of February 11 as a seasonal swing, and continuance in the usual manner would have brought about a peak rate of 25 to 30 per cent.

FURTHER GAIN LIKELY

It is expected that in the next few weeks there will be a double increase, involving recovery of the recent loss and some further gain of seasonal character. Should the automobile industry's season not be affected, in the long run, by recent bank troubles a rate somewhat above 25 per cent is to be expected as the peak in this half of the year.

The broader increase in steel demand is not expected until some time in the second half of the year, after the usual midyear slackening. While in the past steel was usually in the forefront when there was recovery from depression, due to much construction work being undertaken, this time it is likely to lag as prospects for construction are poor. The earlier increase will be for a general manufacturing and for repair and maintenance work, so long neglected.

Railroad rehabilitation will take time, but is fully expected, and there are predictions that eventually the railroads will regain the place they lost about six years ago, of being the largest single customer of the steel industry. Much legislation, of intricate character, is requisite.

Automobile production came to an almost complete standstill and while there is a slight trend upward in prospect real activity is in the indefinite future.

SHEET ORDERS APPEAR

Yesterday brought the first increase in receipt of orders for sheets and it was a marked increase, buying having been very light for a fortnight previous.

Tinplate mills operated at 35 per cent or a shade more this week, while their top rate earlier in the year was close to 50 per cent.

Finished steel prices have been holding well all along the line. There is little or no reference in the trade to "inflation" as a possible cause of higher prices later, but better general business conditions are expected to furnish grounds for advancing the products that have been selling at far below actual cost. The steel trade found some gratifying reading in the United States Supreme Court's decision last Monday in favor of Appalachian Coals, Inc.

HANEY DEFINES CURRENCY INFLATION

By LEWIS HANEY
Professor of Economics, New York University.

NEW YORK, March 18.—"Inflation" is one of the most interesting and important subjects which comes up in the discussion of money.

Inflation may be defined as any decrease in the value of money which is due solely to an increase in the supply or a decrease in its security.

In other words, any increase of money which is not required by an expansion in business, and which would therefore tend to make the supply larger in comparison with the demand for it, would have an inflatory tendency.

In popular language, if we do anything to money which affects its supply and demand, without changing anything else, we are "inflating" the currency. For example, if, where business is dull and prices are low (so that little money is required for business), a large amount of bank notes be issued, the currency is inflated.

EFFECTS ON PRICES

This would tend to raise prices. But we must note that, as to its effect on prices, inflation may be actual or potential. The effectiveness of inflation in raising prices depends upon the demand for commodities.

If inflation come when that demand is increasing, it may at once have the effect stimulating the demand. If it comes in the shape of issues of a less-secure currency which causes people to distrust the future purchasing power of money, it leads them to exchange the "depreciated" currency for commodities and that causes a sort of demand.

It is probably true to say that the general level of prices is a measure of (1), the quantity and the rapidity of circulation of money of all sorts, as compared with (2), the volume of buying and selling, or the work money has to do. This is the so-called "quantity theory" of money value.

THEORY PERVERTED

But inflations pervert this theory by arguing that if we merely increase the quantity of money, we raise the average of prices. Obviously, if we merely increase the quantity of money, while the volume of buying and selling is declining, there need be no tendency to rising prices. The additional currency would not be used.

More than that, the circulation rapidity of money is independent of the quantity. If business is dull, the larger quantity of money is not used. And if the additional currency is regarded with suspicion, its issue may actually slow up business.

We must ever remember that the circulation of money is normally a measure of the circulation of commodities and services in business. If business is active, money circulates rapidly. If business is dull, we must expect slow velocity of money circulation.

DIFFERENCE IN MONEY

It is highly important to keep in mind the difference between "standard money," such as gold, and credit money, "such as paper notes."

Under usual conditions, any large increase in gold supply through mining or business exchanges among nations may reduce the value of gold, and cause a gradual rise in prices (as measured in gold). Such a rise may be permanent. It causes little disturbance.

When, however, we arbitrarily make a large increase in the supply of credit money, without there being any increase in business requirements or any increase in the gold security for such money, the thing is different.

The value of credit money depends upon the credit standing of the issues and upon the value of any collateral such as a gold "cover." Therefore, other things being equal, the more credit money the more strained the credit of the issues and the less the collateral per unit.

It tends to depreciate. People get rid of it by trading it for other things. Speculators buy these things "for a turn." Prices rise until the credit collapses.

WEEKLY BANK CLEARINGS

NEW YORK, March 18.—(AP.)—Bank operations were resumed during the past week at a number of the leading cities in the United States. Clearings were published at some of them, although at most of the centers reporting only a part of the week was included; in most instances, only three days. The comparison with the full week of last year naturally shows a very heavy loss, but it is smaller than might have been expected. The total for the few cities reporting, according to the records of Dun & Bradstreet, Inc., was $2,253,223,000, a decline of 50.9 per cent from the figures of a year ago. At New York City, clearings this week were $1,941,095,000, which were 47.8 per cent less than last year for the comparative week, while the aggregate for the leading centers outside of New York of $312,128,000 shows a reduction from a year ago of 63.1 per cent.

In the accompanying table clearings at the leading points reporting are compared with those of last year. Totals in thousands:

SCHACHT AGAIN BERLIN MONEY LEADER

By MERRYLE S. RUKEYSER
Universal Service.

NEW YORK, March 18.—The return of Hjalmar Schacht to the presidency of the Reichsbank again brings on the scene the financial leader who was largely responsible for the post-inflation economic rebuilding of Germany.

A year before Lausanne, he wrote a book entitled "The End of Reparations."

Mr. Rukeyser

In passing, it may be pointed out that the undemocratic Nazi government has inherited the new leniency of Germany's creditors. When liberal groups were in command, a punitive policy was followed. This is especially important since an attempt will be made by the Allies to shift the cost of such leniency to the United States in forthcoming war debt conversations.

Herr Schacht has long been suspicious of politicians and has in public addresses exhorted business men to exert leadership. Early in the depression, Herr Schacht urged the over-industrialized countries to form a consortium to extend long term credit to backward countries to enable them to acquire capital goods in order to provide employment in the countries in which the purchases were to be made. He pointed out:

In outlining his credit scheme, he said:

"The buyer must be enabled to buy—by advancing credit. Such credit naturally would not cover goods intended for immediate consumption, such as food and clothing. The necessity for repayment would soon put an end to any such inflationist expansion of consumption. But many relatively undeveloped countries have a hitherto unsatisfied need for goods which are used to promote further production, for machinery and railway and highway material. Rails, pipes, locomotives, electrical equipment, power stations, harbor works — these are all needed in the backward lands of Eastern Europe, South America, Asia and Africa. There would be no danger in supplying them on credit, their utilization in those undeveloped countries would increase productivity and yield a return out of which, in the course of years, the long-term credit could be repaid."

FIRMS RECALL 3,700 IN OHIO

CLEVELAND, March 18.—(AP.)—Industrial Ohio began to rumble and stir out of the long sleep today in the wake of bank reopenings.

Three Cleveland industrial firms set the ball rolling with cheering announcements to workers—the call to work.

Approximately 3,700 men got the cheering news from plants connected with the automotive industry. The Fisher Body Company works in Cleveland alone said it was recalling 3,000 former employes to work Monday.

L. R. Scafe, general manager of the plant said when work begins the plant will almost be on a normal basis.

But business in general looked to the bustle in manufacturing circles as the more significant index. After noting the Fisher Body employment call, they pointed to two other Cleveland firms which sent a rush call to old employes.

The Toledo plant of the Chevrolet Motor Company will resume operations Monday. For the last week the plant virtually has been shut down. More than 1,500 workers were employed in it a few weeks ago.

DR. A. H. LIMOUZE TO BROADCAST

The Rev. Dr. Arthur H. Limouze, of New York, secretary of promotion of the Board of National Missions of the Presbyterian Church, will have a busy week-end in Pittsburgh today and tomorrow.

At midnight tonight he will read messages to missionares of the Presbyteran Church of Amerca in foreign fields over KDKA and W8XK. The Rev. Dr. M. M. McDivitt, of the Knoxville Presbyterian Church, will officiate. Music will be provided by the Knoxville church's quartet and organist; Margaret Stoerkle Wilhelm, organist and director; Regina S. Linn, soprano; Minnie B. Heck, contralto; Robertson Tilton, tenor, and Fred Wallois, baritone.

At 10:45 a. m. tomorrow, the Rev. Dr. Limouze will speak in the Avalon Presbyterian Church, Orchard avenue. At 4:45 p. m. he will speak at vesper services in the Bellevue Presbyterian Church, North Fremont avenue.

WIFE SUING RICH MATE 'BROKE'

CHICAGO, March 18.—(INS.)—The former Ada Josephine Bruce "has no railroad fare to come here" from Boston to press her divorce action against Harry K. Chapin, Jr., wealthy secretary of the Lake Coal and Dock Company, Mrs Chapin's attorney disclosed in court yesterday.

The couple was married in Boston in October, 1930, and separated here last October 1. She charges Chapin with cruelty, her complaint stating he struck her with a telephone and twisted her arm. Her attorney said:

URGE BRADDOCK SCHOOL PAY CUT

Elimination of several positions on the Braddock School Board, slashing of teachers' salaries to the state minimum and a 10 per cent reduction in all other salaries was asked by the Braddock Property Owners' Association last night, to effect a three-mill reduction in the borough school tax levy.

Attorney John L. Packer, member of a special committee, told members of the association that the School Board should be able to cut this year's budget $112,000. The present budget is $382,000. The tax levy is 17 mills.

Plans to protest a $50,000 loan recently negotiated by Borough Council and the borough tax rate of 11 mills were also made at the meeting, according to Fred Haas, association member.

GANG BEATS 2 ON NORTH SIDE

North Side police today were searching for a gang that, apparently without provocation, attacked two men at McClure avenue and Eckert street last night.

Joseph Demgan, 25, of 2812 Pitler street, North Side, suffering a possible fracture of the skull, was taken to St. John's Hospital. His brother-in-law, Frank Meyer, 34, of the same address, suffered lacerations on the head which were treated at the hospital.

Police said the two were walking

Volunteers to Hear Evangelistic Talks

Lieut. Col. Frank H. Wise will supervise an evangelistic meeting in the Volunteers of America chapel, 724 East Diamond street, at 8 p. m. tomorrow.

Evangelistic talks will be given by laymen affiliated with the organization. Capt. Mazie O'Connell will sing, and the Volunteer Silver Trio will furnish special music for the service.

FLAGS ON BIER OF GEN. KING

MILWAUKEE, March 18.—(AP.)—While military organizations and the Masonic lodge planned impressive funeral rites, the body of Brig. Gen. Charles King, 88, veteran of five wars, lay in state at a funeral home today.

There were no flowers on the casket. At the request of Wisconsin's premier soldier, flags of the country, which he served for 70 years, alone will be his funeral decorations.

Col. Fred C. Best, an old friend and Army comrade of Gen. King, delayed announcement of funeral arrangements pending word from Commander Rufus King, U. S. N., the general's son, on duty somewhere in the Gulf of Mexico. Next Tuesday was tentatively chosen as the funeral date.

Gen. King died yesterday. Physicians said death was hastened by shock received Wednesday when he tripped over a rug and fractured a shoulder.

Born at Albany, N. Y., October 12, 1844, Gen. King began his military career in the Civil War.

Rev. Frank E. Smith Conference Speaker

The Rev. Frank Edwin Smith, of the First Unitarian Church, Ellsworth and Morewood avenues, has been asked to give the Conference sermon at the Laymen's League week of religious education at the summer conference at Star Island, off Portsmouth, N. H., beginning July 9. This is one of the most important meetings of the Unitarian Fellowship during the year, and will be attended by a large number of workers in the field of religious education in Pittsburgh and elsewhere.

Playgirls in Love

"Letters?" said Judith. "To you, Genevieve, you mean?"

"No. Written to Cliss! Loranda's been having an affair with Cliss for the past year, right under my very nose—the double-crossing demon!"

* * *

"They're the most disgraceful things you ever read!"

"But—but why do you tell me all this? What have I got to do with it?" asked Judith in a low, shocked voice.

"Because the designing, immoral minx grabbed your boy-friend as she did mine—only she hasn't succeeded—Cliss is sick and tired of her——"

TO EXPOSE LORANDA

Judith was dumb. She stared at Genevieve's passion-distorted face as though she were in some bad dream.

"Can't you say anything? Don't you see what a weapon this is? What a lever?"

"For—for what?"

"For exposing Loranda's character to Barry Deane, you simpleton! For letting him see the type of woman he's got himself engaged to! READ those, I say! A grand and complete record of her mind—a soiled dove's love-letters——"

Genevieve's voice rose higher and higher.

"They're not mine," Judith said wretchedly. Her brain was in a whirl. But she wasn't surprised to hear all this . . .

"If you won't show them to Barry—I will! I swear I will! I'll show Loranda up!"

"No, Genevieve, you must not. These are—oh, let me think—these are Mr. Clissold's property—"

"I'll say they're not! Anything that's got to do with him is MINE! It was I who found those letters in his apartment. And 'he who finds keeps!' Ha! ha!" Genevieve laughed hysterically.

"Oh, hush!"

MAD JEALOUSY

"You can't shush me! I'll say the world's a funny place! Cliss and I . . . and you and this darn fool Barry . . . ! And then, Loranda Tewson, fooling and double-crossing everybody!"

"She isn't doing that any more. She's in love—really in love. You—we—just because we're hurt—oh, we can't ruin two other people's happiness, Genevieve—"

"Don't be an idiot. You talk like a Sunday school tract. God's put this means into your hand—"

"Meaning myself? But I don't care—I'll ruin Loranda!"

"That won't make you any the happier . . ."

* * *

"I swear if you won't do it, I'll take them direct to Barry Deane myself!" Genevieve had vowed.

Mad jealousy was in Genevieve's heart . . . shone in her eyes . . . lurked in the clutch of her trembling fingers.

BARRY VISITS

She loved Lawton Clissold . . . always would be mad about him, no matter what he had done, she sobbed aloud.

Then Genevieve screamed that she hated the man who had ruined her life . . .

Judith telephoned for a nurse-masseuse . . . a calm, sensible Swede living in the neighborhood who was a friend of Zella's. The latter coaxed Genevieve to bed.

Saddened and heartsick at the sordidness of life, her own loss weighing heavily upon her, and those letters of Loranda's like red coals burning shame in her handbag, Judith departed.

What was she going to do with them? Destroy them? Give them back to Lawton Clissold, from whom Genevieve had stolen them? Or to their lax perpetrator?

* * *

On a rainy night of May towards the end of the month, Judith was sitting alone in the little flat when a knock came at the door and she opened it, and there stood Barry!

For a moment they both stared at each other silently.

"May I come in? I had to come. There's something I must say to you, Judith."

But she had known that he would come, one day . . .

"Come in, Barry. Zella's gone out," Judith said tonelessly.

BLISS AND AGONY

Under the painted Italian lantern in the little entrance-hall where she had welcomed him so many times before—how long ago that seemed!—Barry stared down at Judith.

"How pale you look! Have you been ill? I haven't seen you in so long. I knew you'd been moved into another department——"

"Yes. The same sort of work, your coat's all wet. I'll hang it in the bathroom."

He walked into the living room, and Judith had her brief moment of respite. She hung up his coat on a peg behind the bathroom door and leaned against the wash basin, trembling.

So Barry had come here tonight!

Was he going to make an explanation?

But she must keep her pride. Must be as casual to him as he had been to her. Don't let him know that the very sight of him, his blessed nearness, was a mixture of bliss and agony.

She was like some pale ghost. She told herself Barry had seen how she had lost her beauty . . .

She switched on the light, hunted for rouge in the cupboard that was set into the wall. She couldn't find any.

"What does it matter how I look? He's nothing to me any more—" she told herself, "and I'm nothing in the world to Barry!"

But he had come! She could hear him moving in the living room restlessly.

CRYSTAL FORMS

They are divided into six systems according to the inclination and comparative length of their axes. Each form can vary also according to the whole or part development of all the faces.

The forms shown are isometric whole ones, of which the three axes are equal and at right angles to each other. The five other systems of crystal form are: Tetragonal (three axes at right angles, two axes of equal length); orthorhombic (three axes at right angles and of unequal length); monoclinic (two axes at right angles, one inclined, length unequal); triclinic (three axes inclined and of unequal length); hexagonal (three axes in same plane 60 degrees to each other, equal in length. One vertical axis at right angles to the others). (Gratacap: Minerals.) (Chemistry.)

CRYSTAL DEVELOPMENT

They start with a nucleal crystal (the smallest possible is one molecule) which enlarge by accretion. The nucleal crystal may be different in form as the completed but of the same system. (1) Barite; (2) calcite; (3) fluorite. (Gratacap: Minerals.) Chemistry.)

ELEPHANTS AT HERACLEA (280 B. C.)

Pyrrhus, King of Epirus, defeating the Romans with the aid of his elephants. The moral effect of the charging beasts unknown to the Romans was as great a factor in the victory of Pyrrhus as the introduction of the tanks by the Allies in the World War. (World's History.)

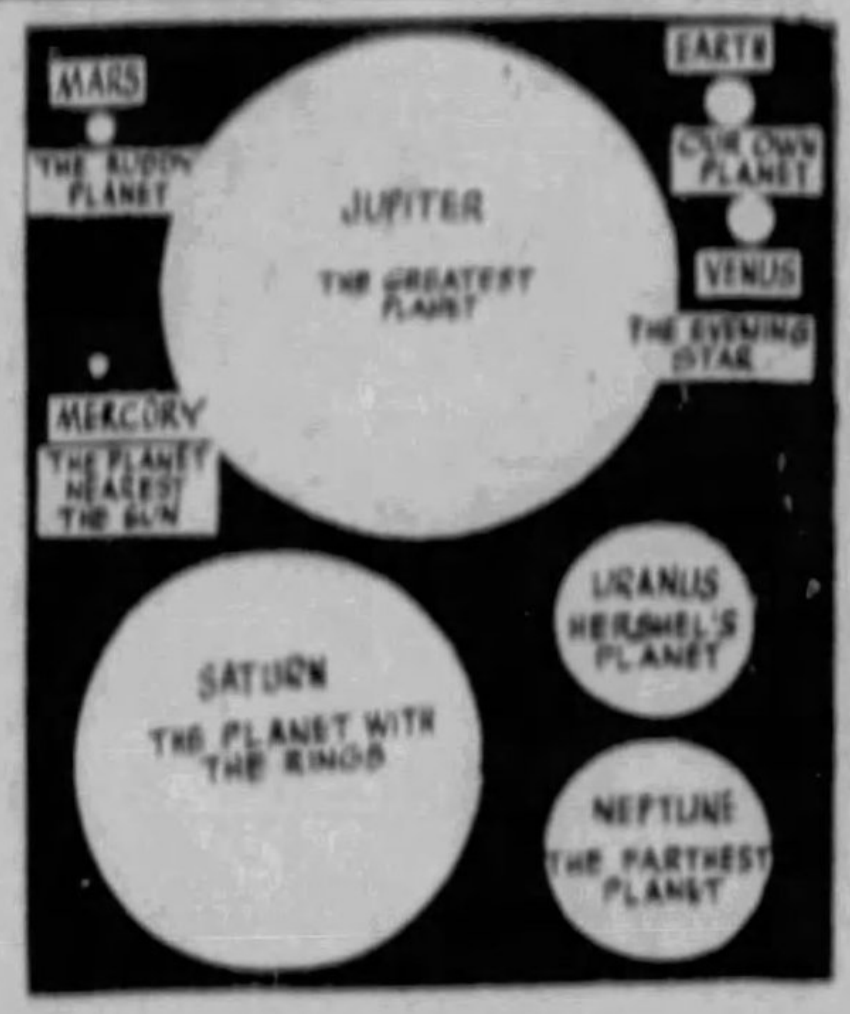
HORATIUS AT THE BRIDGE

According to legend, Horatius Cocles, the celebrated Roman hero (about 500 B. C.), kept Porsena's army at bay singlehanded until the bridge over the Tiber could be destroyed and Rome saved from the invaders. (Guerber: Story of the Romans.) (World's History.)



COMPARATIVE SIZES OF PLANETS

The four interior and the four giant planets shown. The ninth planet, Pluto, is about the size of the earth. Pluto was discovered by Clyde Tombaugh, astronomer, of the Lowell Observatory in Flagstaff, Ariz., on February 18, 1930. (Science.)

SAVE FOOD, NOT ICE

UNITS OF NATIONAL DEFENSE

Seaplane leaving catapult from U. S. S. California (left). Gun firing from fort (right). One of the most important tasks of the government is to protect the country from danger, both from the outside and from within. Modern airforce, effective navy and fortification of the strategic points are, besides a strong, well equipped army, the most important factors of national security. KITE AND AIRPLANE

The operating forces of a kite and an airplane are the same in principle. The pressure of the wind on a sloped surface (kite) results in a lifting force which counteracts the weight of the kite and keeps it in the air. In the airplane the sloped surface is represented by the wings and the rapid forward movement of the plane through the pull of the propeller substitutes the wind (moving air); that is the reason that a certain velocity of the plane is necessary to lift it from the ground and to maintain it in air. They Fall Out in the Spring

Next Tuesday is the first day of spring so we might as well start leaping from bough to bough and chirp some lightweight twittering.

We always feel like a millionaire in the spring but we can't prove it. There is something influential about the sunshine and compound interesting about the warm southern breezes.

We commerce to think of love, life and the subsequent alimony actions. We dwell dotishly on that little white cot upon the little green hill, where the little brook ripples and the station announcer always breaks in with some tough advice about your dentist twice a year.

Now, we don't want to see a dentist twice a year. We don't want to see him once a year. We don't want to see him at all he said in conclusion and sat down.

But, there is something about spring that makes our teeth revolve on their pivots. We don't know why our molars collapse with warm weather. Maybe, the putty gets soft.

I-ER-WANT YOU TO-ER-LOOK MY TEETH OVER

However, we do see our dentist and this is the month. And we open our mouth when he orders and when we scream he knows we are the stuff of which heroes and divots are made.

They say a woman is much braver than a man in the dental chair. In that case, the next time we are in the chair we are going to ask the doctor to place a lady in our ancient lap. He can buzzsaw her teeth and we will do the testimonial yelling.

There are millions of dentists in the country and more are going to graduate next June. In order to make payment certain for the operator and easy for the client you can have your dental work financed by a bonding company. It works out perfectly. If you skip a dividend the company takes your bed, stove and chairs. And if you get another timely toothache you never miss 'em.

We're going to the dentist. And if you want to come along we'll get you one on the aisle.

Mayor Kline's Plea

The Public Will Not Object to Clemency If He Is Ill—Brief Comment On Local News.

Pleading that he is ill and that the six months' term in jail to which he has been sentenced for malfeasance will endanger him, Mayor Charles H. Kline has offered to resign at once if saved from imprisonment. District Attorney Andrew T. Park properly asks for authority to name an impartial commission of physicians to examine the Mayor.

If Kline's plea is substantiated, public sentiment will not oppose clemency. Unquestionably the Mayor has already sustained severe punishment in the humiliation that his conviction and sentence have brought him. The people of Pittsburgh are not vindictive, and there is no desire to chastise a sick man. But it is for the court to decide.

The excuses offered by Senators who helped to defeat the local option Sunday sports bill fail to impress. Unwarranted fear and blind prejudice are responsible for the opposition to the repeal of the Blue Law. How any reasonable person can say, in the light of the experience of other states which have liberalized the Sunday laws, that repeal will be a bad thing for Pennsylvania, is incomprehensible.

The proposal to differentiate between various sports—to make baseball and football legal on Sunday, but all other games illegal—is ridiculous. And scarcely less ridiculous is the proposal to permit professional baseball games but prohibit Sunday movies. The reasonable way to deal with the question is to permit any kind of innocent entertainment.

The clamor of protest that has gone up all over the state in consequence of the defeat of the Blue Law modification is undoubtedly having its effect. The talk of reconsidering is evidence of this. Let the demand for repeal be redoubled, and the recalcitrant legislators will be brought to see the light. Now is the time for the liberals to bring all their forces into action.

The attitude of organized labor towards proposals to lower the standard of public education, as an economy measure, leaves nothing to be desired. P. T. Fagan, president of Pittsburgh's Central Labor Union, expressed labor's position when he told John H. Adams, principal of Perry High School, that the trades unions are against any impairment of the efficiency of the public schools.

*Labor's position was declared at a meeting of rep*resentatives of 125 local unions at which Mr. Adams told of attempts to curtail educational appropriations and make political ducks and drakes of the public schools. Wage-earners who cannot afford to send their children to private schools must be specially watchful to protect the public educational system.

*After two months of study the County Commis*sioners have set the budget for the year at a figure which the expected receipts will easily cover. Elected officials are voluntarily cutting their salaries 15 per cent, and other salaries have also been slashed. By vigorously campaigning for payment of the personal property tax, the revenue from that source has been increased. The Commissioners have done a good job.

*The Pittsburgh office of the Department of Com*merce has just issued a compilation showing that foreign countries imported $76,219,384 worth of Pennsylvania merchandise in the first nine months of 1932, as compared with $142,489,550 worth in the corresponding period of 1931. To what extent the huge drop can be attributed to business depression, and to what extent to the "Buy British," "Buy French," "Buy Italian," etc., movements can only be conjectured; but these nationalist movements no doubt have had an appreciable effect.

The decrease in exports of Pennsylvania products, caused at least partly by foreigners' increased unwillingness to purchase things produced outside of their own countries and colonies, is a reminder to our manufacturers and producers that they must look to a greater extent than formerly to the home markets for an outlet for their products. Here is where the "Buy American" movement will prove useful.

A timely warning is issued by the Pittsburgh Motor Club. The period in which automobiles must be officially inspected is drawing to a close, and owners who have not attended to it as yet are advised to do so during the coming week and thus to avoid the rush that is certain to come at the end of the month. Many motorists have neglected this duty.

The Pittsburgh Goodwill Industries announce a "bundle campaign" to be held April 4, 5 and 6. Boy Scouts will go from house to house soliciting bundles of unwanted or outgrown clothing for the use of the poor. It is desired to call the attention of the public to the matter now, so that housewives and others may have plenty of time to go through wardrobes and select apparel for donation to this meritorious cause.

*Another appeal that the charitable people of Pitts*burgh should not let pass entirely unheeded is for aid for the sufferers in the Southern California earthquake. The American Red Cross is trying to raise $450,000 by voluntary contributions. A. K. Oliver, chairman of the Pittsburgh Red Cross, reminds the community that to be effective contributions should be made promptly.

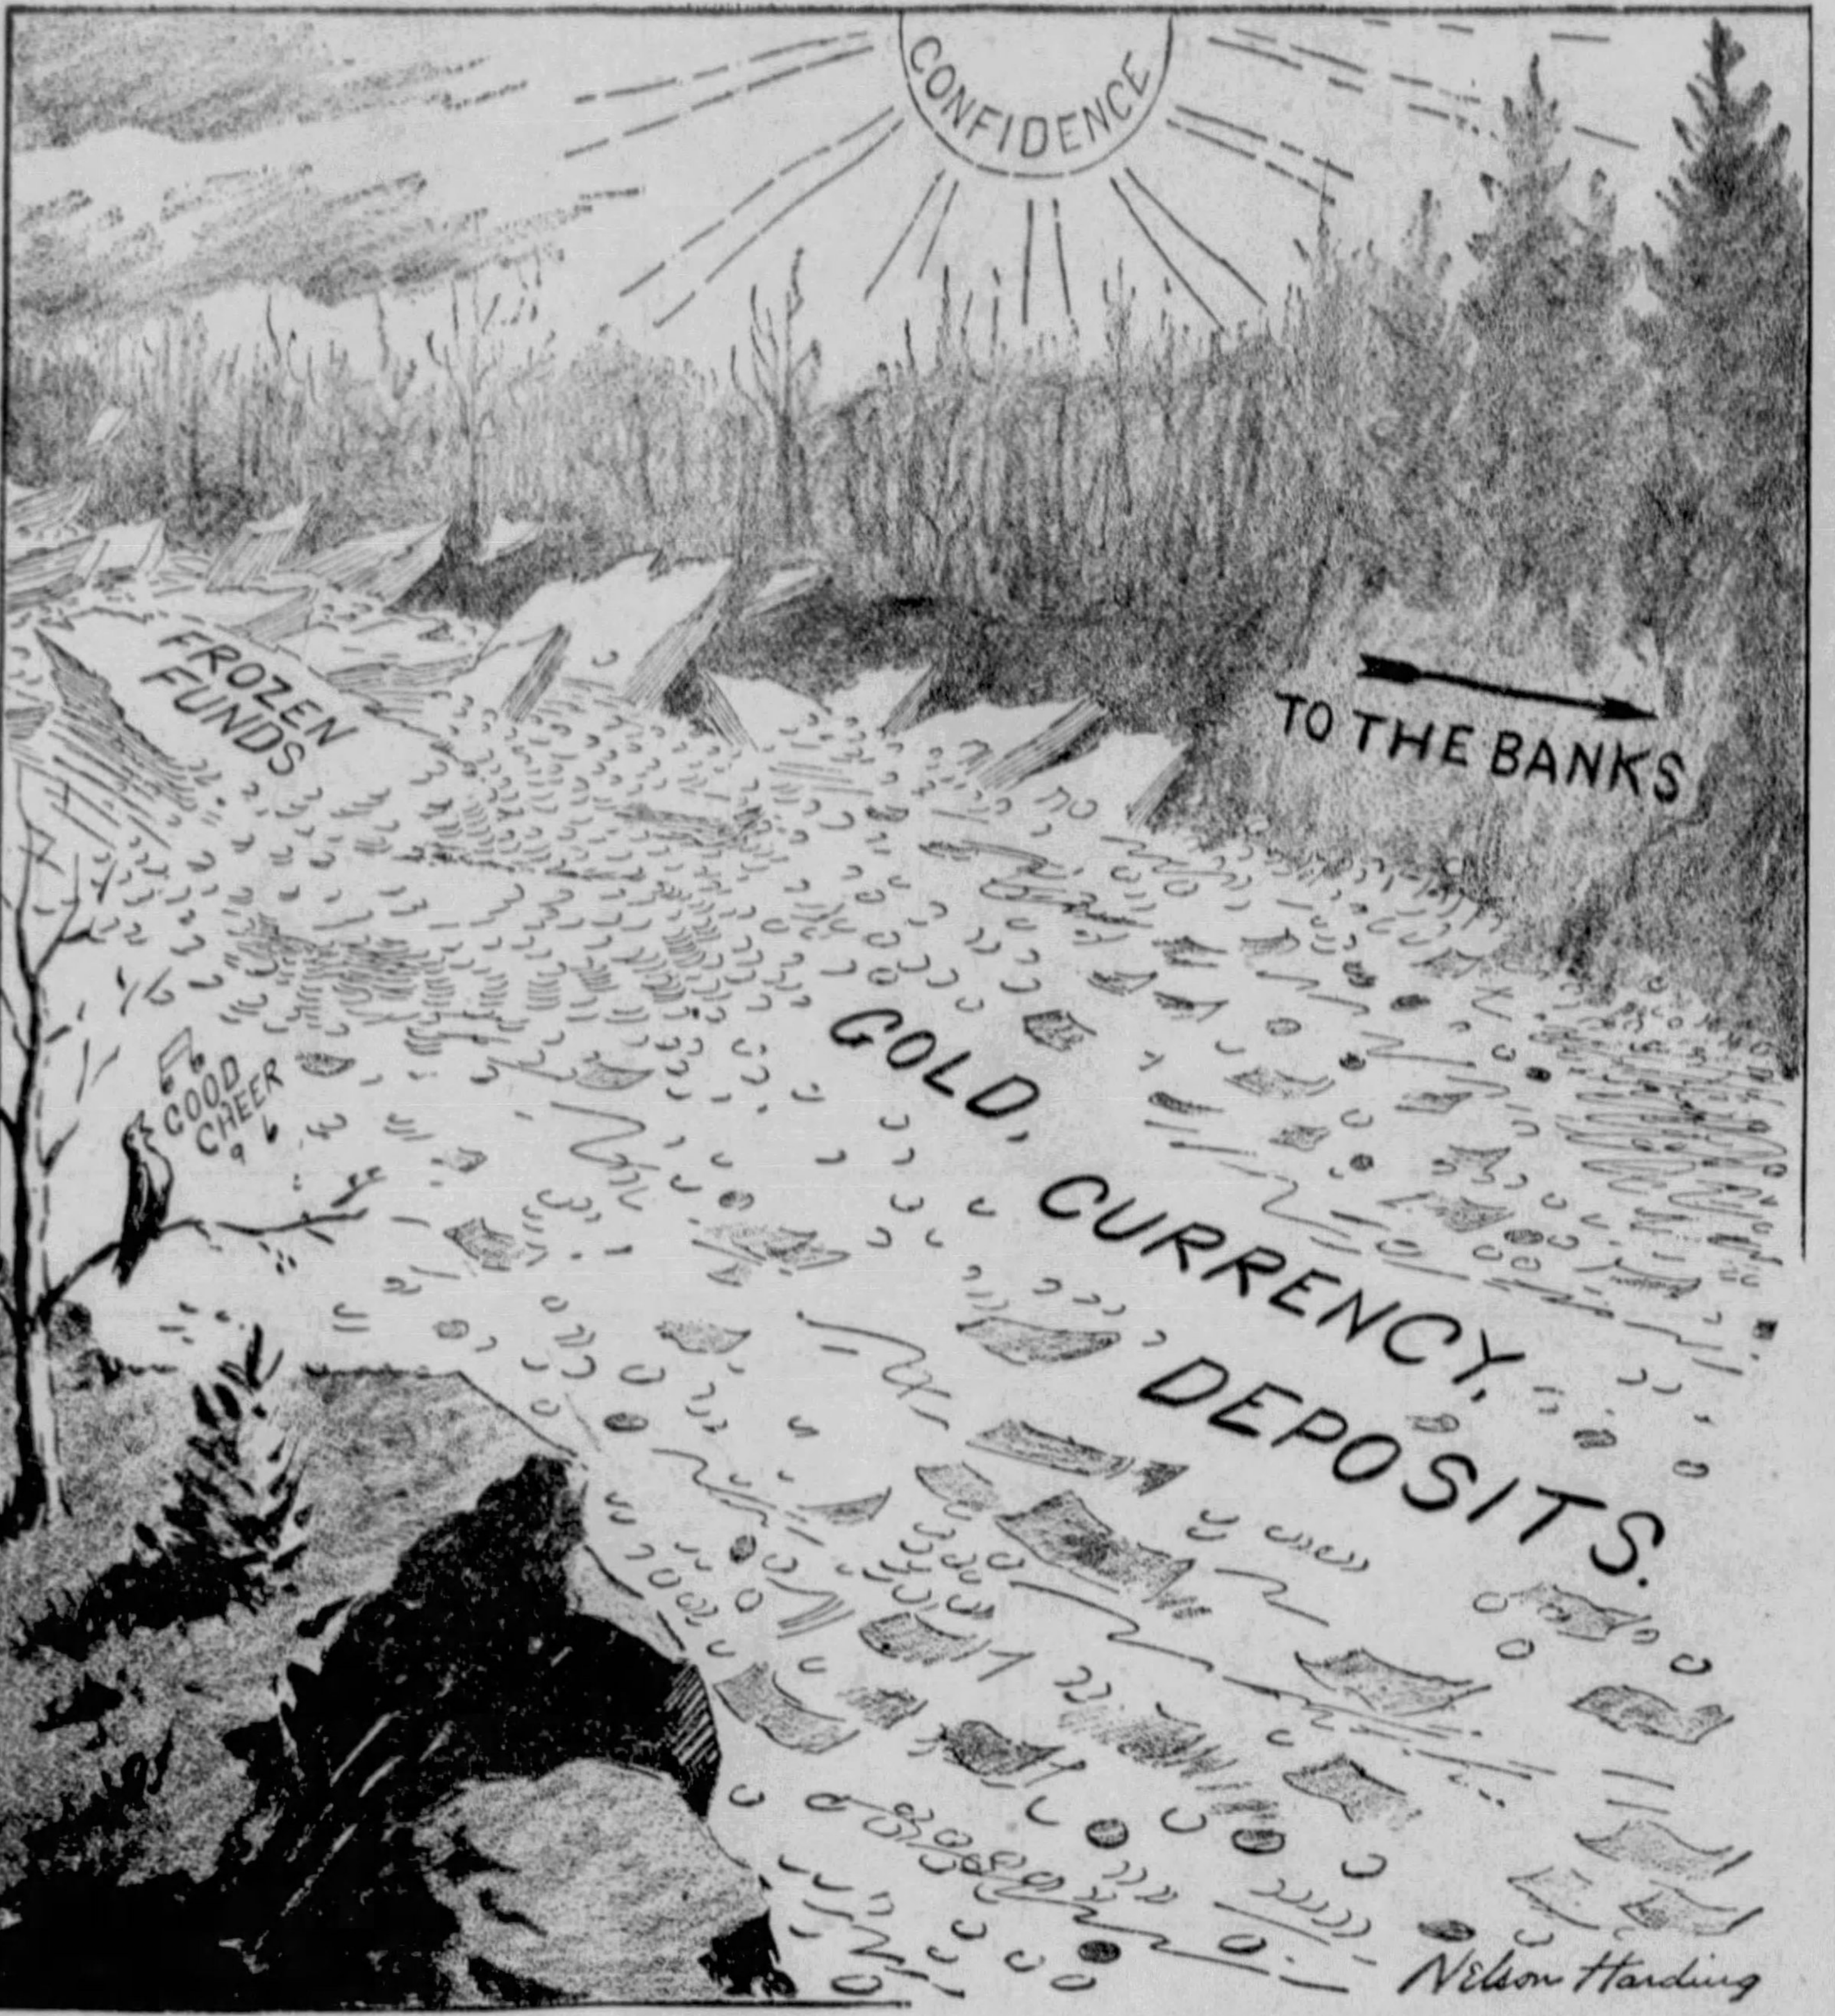
Speed is also desirable in putting unemployment relief plans into effect. The time has passed when prolonged study could be given to such proposals. It would be gratifying to see early action on the program of the Pittsburgh group headed by Edgar J. Kaufmann. An impressively large number of economists have expressed faith in the value of this proposal to thaw "frozen labor."

One of Pittsburgh's needs is a park or breathing place in the downtown business district—a public square with trees and benches to relieve the monotony of solid blocks of business houses. The North Side business district has several such parks. A charming photograph of an old gentleman feeding the pigeons in West Park, while two attractive tots look on, will be found in the Gravure Section in tomorrow's issue of the Sunday Sun-Telegraph.

American archeology presents much that will compare in interest with the study of the ancient peoples of the Old World. The American Weekly, distributed as a supplement with the Sunday Sun-Telegraph, will give a good example of this tomorrow in an article, "How the Mysterious Mayans Made War." It is illustrated in colors.

The Ice Melts

By Nelson Harding



Beneath the sun's effective beams
The ice is melting, and the streams,
Released from frost, begin to flow
And swiftly into freshets grow.

And Winter can no longer hold
The torrents running free and strong,
Nor can it hush the robin's song.

The Rhyming Optimist

By ALINE MICHAELIS

I Will Forget

Oh, now that spring is coming
I must write these lines,
Before the bright young April's brow
With magic shines!—

Now, with the spring's approaching,
I have to gird my heart,
Lest I forget that daffodils
Must soon depart.

And not alone for lovers
Does nature fashion this
Glad time of golden, singing hours
Of bloom and bliss!

For in the spring time only
All other things grow dim,
And earth a cup of fragrant wine
Because of him!

Yes, let me boast of wisdom
When spring comes in, some windy day,
I will forget!

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, March 18.—So little is heard of those who have beaten depression's rap. For instance, Sam and Bela Spewack, who wandered to Hollywood at the first swoop of the big dip, took very moderate living quarters, wrote and sold scenarios, and never saw the inside of the Brown Derby.

In two years and a half, they salted $30,000 in short-term government notes—not taking chances on a bank blowup. Then they came to New York, wrote a play and sold the screen rights for $40,000. The play, also, had a fair run. So now they join the promenade on Easy Street.

Ollie Arntz, which sounds like the cry of the top-mounter of an acrobatic troupe, lost his $60-a-week job as a department store ad writer. His wife lost her job, warbling in a song shop. They began to write radio skits and gags. In 11 months they made $8,000.

Almost everyone knows several who have similarly prospered during the depression. At breakfast the other day, a sage, of 60, observed: "The next crop of millionaires will be those who, instead of grousing, are thinking up ideas for which the world is going to be mightily in need."

* * *

On the street recently I was handed a packet of matches on the outside flap of which was printed: "Have you a job for Ralph Neave, Jr.?" Inside, was a recording of his age, education, and list of jobs he had successfully held. A lot of people are going to think of Mr. Neave when they hear of a job suiting him.

* * *

I drove down to Bayside to call a minute on Mrs. James J. Corbett the evening her famous husband was slipping off into the shadows. The home, on the wooded edge of the bay, was shrouded in brooding darkness, except for a light that burned in the ex-champion's bedroom upstairs. The chirp of an occasional cricket relieved a stillness that was eerie. One could not help but think of the roar of the crowd he so often faced, and his contrasting peace, in facing the last enemy. Instead of the excitement of seconds in white sweaters, was the calm of a poised nurse in white. Mrs. Corbett, torn by days of anxious bedside watching, sat heroically dry-eyed. "I shall miss him so," she said. So will the world.

Things one remembers about stage folk: Mary Boland's dumbbell bewilderment . . . Beatrice Lillie's arched entrance expression . . . Eddie Cantor's quick handpats . . . Judith Anderson's earnest listening . . . Frank Craven's naturalness . . . Ed Wynn's goofy blink . . . James Barton's lifeless encore bows . . . Henry Stephenson's lisp . . . Victor Moore's gawkiness . . . Helen Menken's hands . . . William Gaxton's poise . . . Helen Morgan's nervousness . . . Alice Brady's twinkle . . . George M. Cohan's walk . . . Fannie Brice's "boidie" . . . Zita Johann's far-away look . . . Ina Claire's glacial manner . . . Katherine Cornell's curtsies . . . Spring Byington's twitter . . . David Warfield's sobby choke . . . Incidentally, a magnificent trouper returned to the Rialto recently for what grandma called a whipstitch. I refer to Florence Reed. In that jolly medievalism before handwork went out and machinery came in to ruin everything, she was my favorite actress. I had not seen her in 15 years. Such gaps, usually prove disappointing. But not with Miss Reed.

Even those who do not warm to Al Smith, cannot deny the engaging quality of his magnetism. Several months ago, I was in the Empire Building around noon. It seemed to have the gloomy aura of a crypt—a sort of cenotaph to civilization's despair. Yesterday, I was there at the same time. Smith, his cigar akimbo and derby at jaunty angle, was chatting with a group of familiars in the foyer. The whole structure seemed suddenly recharged with vitality. Everything was the same as months before—except Al was there!

* * *

The only other person I know who can vitalize a dead gathering so quickly is Michael Arlen. The minute he steps into a room, everybody wants to begin ringing doorbells. Or play leapfrog.

* * *

It may be imagination born of acute sensitivity, but when I enter the room in the same manner, I have the feeling of a collective murmur: "You here! Another evening goes sour." Just a sweetheart of a party-queerer!

LISTEN, WORLD

By Elsie Robinson

What do I want?
I don't know.
I've never known.
But I used to think I would.

How plainly it all comes back—and the wonder and worry of beginning life. Confusion everywhere. People being foolish, getting into messes. Suffering from tragedies which seemed so unnecessary to my young ignorance.

Yet, surely, this lovely world was made for happiness! Then why didn't people make up their minds what they want to do, and go after that happiness? But they didn't. Instead, they deliberately muddled everything, or so it seemed to me. Why? What was it all about? How did they get that way?

Of one thing only was I sure—I wasn't going to spoil my life that way. No muddling along for me! Presently, when I was a little older and the dizziness had quieted, I was going to sit down and plan everything out. I would decide exactly what I wanted to do in life, what I wanted to be, and then I'd go right ahead and be it.

Yes, in a year or two I'd know my own mind perfectly. And after that, everything would be easy.

So I planned, at 15, at 20, at 25—

Then faintly, but fearfully, it began to dawn on me that it wasn't going to be as easy to know one's own mind and plot out one's life as I had thought. For the older I grew, the more there was to see, and do, and know.

Instead of making a simple choice between doing This or doing That, I had to choose between thousands of likely projects, each one of which appealed to me tremendously. For I, myself, was as varied as the complicated world in which I lived.

I wasn't just one person, Elsie Robinson, who liked to draw and write, adored babies and was crazy to have a little house with ruffled curtains, and be a good wife and mother some day.

I was scores of persons, all tied together in one lanky, blonde bundle. And each one of those persons wanted to do or be something different from all the others! And how could I possibly decide which person I would be?

Faintly I began to perceive this problem at twenty—and I've been perceiving it, with increasing misery, ever since. For though I have lived nearly fifty years, I have never yet been able to decide what I wanted to do or be.

I've wanted to be a Good Woman, living a quiet, protected life, beloved by my family and neighbors, sinking my roots deeper and deeper into the gentle soil of my home—

But I've also wanted to be a gypsy, without home or family ties, wandering recklessly, joyously, to the far corners of the earth, seeing everything there was to be seen.

And then again I've wanted to be simply a good worker, doing my bit to boost the scheme of things.

Yet, even while these conflicting desires tore at my heart, I've wanted to be a Brilliant, Beautiful, Bad Woman, eating forbidden apples from every tabooed tree!

So the years have gone—happy in spots, for a very little while; harassed by confusion and curiosity, restlessness and remorse, most of the time.

AND, IN SPITE OF ALL THE EXPERIMENTS I'VE MADE AND THE TEARS I'VE SHED, I STILL DON'T KNOW WHAT I WANT!

But I've made one helpful discovery:

IF I DON'T KNOW WHAT I WANT, NEITHER DOES ANYONE ELSE!

And so, though I haven't been able to make a success of Elsie Robinson's life, I've learned, at least, to understand and pity and love all those other muddled millions. And that's sumpin'."

On a Party Pledge—'Action—Action Now'

By Claude G. Bowers

Author of "The Struggle for Democracy in America," "Founders of the Republic," "Jefferson and Democracy," "The Tragic Era" and other important works, now writing for the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

President Roosevelt has sent his third message to Congress, making a record for brevity:

"I recommend to the Congress the passage of legislation for the immediate modification of the Volstead act in order to legalize the manufacture and sale of beer and other beverages of such alcoholic content as is permissible under the Constitution; and to provide through such manufacture and sale by substantial taxes a proper and much-needed revenue for the government.

"I deem action at this time to be of the highest importance."

If there is any major subject in the world that could thus be urged upon the Congress in few words it is that of the immediate modification of the Volstead Act to permit the manufacture and sale of beer.

The proposition of modification was presented clearly, unqualifiedly to the people whose government this is, at the recent election; they voted overwhelmingly for modification.

The issue between the parties was distinct. The Democrats had no ifs nor ands in their platform pledge. It was a pledge of honor. And the integrity of the party's promise is involved.

Such being the case all that should be required from the President in any communication to Congress on the subject should be a reminder.

* * *

The Deficit Must Be Met

Aside from the pledge of honor given by the party now in power, there are reasons why some such step would be recommended under the existing fiscal condition of the nation.

This nation now is fighting to balance the budget and maintain the credit of the government. The deficit must be met. It cannot be lifted by any one act. The enormously high taxes we are paying this week will not do it. The drastic economies thus far planned will go far toward it, but not quite achieve it.

We need the revenue that will come from the tax on beer; we want to divert the benefit from the bootleggers, who are immune from taxation, to the Treasury of the United States. This tax on beer some have estimated will bring in as much as $300,000,000.

Without this tax $300,000,000 must be found in some other way, and in the matter of taxation on enterprises now legitimate and on the earnings of men now engaged in lawful business, we have reached the point of diminishing returns.

We need this tax on beer—we have to have it—and the party in power in the most solemn and positive manner has pledged it.

Only a reminder should be necessary.

There is not enough sophistry in all the crooked minds of the world to find a pretext for ignoring or repudiating that party pledge.

* * *

Beer Tax Would Aid Employment

But it is not merely the tax money the nation needs, it needs any and everything that can be done to put jobless men back into the purchasing class. The reopening of the breweries will give employment to some hundreds of thousands of men.

It will give work to men now jobless in the making of bottles, barrels, corks, etc.

It will furnish a market for the grain of the farmer that now goes to waste.

By putting a great army of men back to work and on a payroll it will increase the purchasing power of a million people.

This will increase the business of merchants and manufacturers having no direct connection with the manufacture and sale of beer.

It was to be assumed, therefore, that Congress would act promptly. If ever there was a matter on which caucus action by a party was justified it was on this plan of modification, for this is emphatically a party pledge.

* * *

The Organized Minorities

There is an organized minority against a thorough investigation into the vicious bank practices that so nearly wrecked the financial fabric.

There is an organized minority against the modification of the Volstead Act.

There is an organized minority against the economy program which is proposed solely because the financial condition of the nation demands it.

But now we are at war against a depression that has threatened to sink us all, and the responsible representatives of the nation can do no less than sternly to perform their manifest duty to the nation as a whole.

* * *

The People Are With Roosevelt

In the meantime President Roosevelt asks the Senate Committee on Banking to continue its investigations into the former practices of banks that are ruinous that the Government may more intelligently frame measures for the better protection of the people.

This can now be done with safety, since banks now open or about to open have been found to be sound, and no revelation as to past practices can affect the present solidity of these institutions.

Now that we at length have come to the conclusion that we cannot merely sit tight and confidently await a return to the "good old days," now that we know that our troubles have come from evil practices; now that we have been forced to the realization that there must be a reorganization that definitely will put an end to such practices, the Government must have a clear picture of just what has been going on.

Nothing will do so much to restore the people's confidence in Government banking and business than the knowledge that the facts are being faced courageously and with a determination to clean house, and start over again on the basis of a new deal and a square deal.

Happily we are now convinced that the nation's chosen leader has the vision, the honesty and the courage to do the right thing. The people are with him. And the Congress must stand by.

It is now or never.

ONCE OVERS

By J. J. Mundy

Do you ever try to overcome that jealous spirit of yours?

No; you accept it as something outside your privilege to control, and go right on with an active imagination to increase the trouble.

And the surprising part of it is that jealous people do not realize how much they themselves are to blame for all the unhappiness engendered.
